A Hundred Billion Cups

Coffee prices, so lately riding high, have dropped. Travel broadens. It also restricts.

It is impossible for me to lift a cup of it without seeing the patient hands and faces of those who pick it, and those who are meagerly fed or largely starved as its price is up or down.

Thousands of men, women and children work for as little as 35 cents a day picking it. Their daily lives are harsh enough when prices are good.

Lives of millions of Latin Americans are tied even more closely to coffee than were the small farmers of the deep South of 50 years ago to cotton, when there was no other crop. Those years, too, saw whole families in the field. Their hooves rose and fell above tired backs, as women and children, with pinched faces, stomachs and souls, joined in the eternal "chopping" . . . or moved wearily along the rows picking the fluffed bolls.

More than a HUNDRED BILLION CUPS of coffee are drunk in the United States each year. But coffee is much more than a drink. It is no exaggeration to say the future of the two great "western islands," North and South America, and Central America which links them, likely will be determined by the future of coffee.

'Brown Gold'

Dr. Andres Uribe of Colombia has written a book about coffee. ("Brown Gold"—Random House.) It is readable, informative, and vastly entertaining, which is all one could ask of a book. The official United States representative of the Coffee Growers of Colombia since 1946, the biographical note specifies he "eats, sleeps, drinks coffee—six or eight cups a day." (For one who has that much coffee before starting the day's routine, Dr. Uribe seems almost a teetotaler.)

The book is a history of coffee—and a study in its economics. Last year Americans consumed more than 60 per cent of the world's total production of coffee.

We began as tea drinkers. Resentment against the tea tax, culminating in the Boston Tea Party and revolution, turned the nation toward coffee.

Coffee had its origin in Kenya and Abyssinia. The forest peoples pushed down into the Arabian peninsula taking coffee seeds with them. Arabians and Persians had it from them.

Arabian Legend

The Arabian legend of its origin as a drink concerns a goat-herd called Kaldi. Watching his goats prance and cavort after eating the red berries from a small tree, the curious goatherd himself ate a handful and soon was dancing with his goats. A Moslem holy man to whom he told his story had a vision. When boiled in water, said Allah to his servant, the berries promoted wakefulness—and wakefulness promoted prayer.

Coffee was on its way to become the world's favorite drink. The great "coffee houses" of Europe became centers of literature, art and conversation.

Many are its legends. Early European and Oriental doctors prescribed it as a medicine . . . good for distempers and colics. An early pope blessed the drink, making it Christian—the Moslem unbelievers having claimed it as Allah's.

Dr. Uribe dispels many myths. There is only a little caffeine in coffee. It is harmless. It is not habit forming. If one leaves off sugar and cream one may drink countless cups without harm. Children, if they like it, may have all they wish. It is the servant of man, not his foe.

But—coffee is a way of life for millions—not just a drink. Seven nations, Colombia, El Salvador, Guatemala, Brazil, Haiti, Nicaragua, and Costa Rica depend chiefly on export coffee. Seven others lean on it heavily. Every facet of Latin-American life is influenced for good or bad by the United States' consumption of coffee and bananas.

The joy of the American housewife at cheaper coffee is countered by hunger and sorrow in Latin America. Somehow, we must work out a balance.

Senate Tax Truce Plan Gains Favor

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27 (AP)—Influential Senate Democrats today were reported backing a compromise that might help bring a truce in the congressional tax battle with President Eisenhower.

The new plan would put off until July 1, 1956, the proposed $20-a-person income tax cut and would extend present corporation and excise levies to the same date.

GEORGE UNDECEDED

Sen. George (D-Ga.) said he did not know whether such a proposal would be laid before the Senate Finance Committee tomorrow. The committee meets then to consider a House-approved tax bill carrying the $20 reduction which Eisenhower has denounced as reaching "the heights of fiscal irresponsibility."

George said that if a situation arises where a compromise seems in order "we might do something about it."

From other sources it was learned that the compromise, reportedly first suggested by Sen. Smathers (D-Fla.), has the tacit approval of Democratic committee members with the exception of Chairman Byrd (D-Va.).

Byrd said he had not been consulted and would not comment. There were indications, however, that he was not likely to receive the proposal favorably.

The Virginian has opposed cutting any taxes now because of the prospect of further increasing the federal deficit. Sponsors contended, however, that the compromise actually might increase Treasury receipts in the new fiscal year beginning this July 1.

MAY CUT REVENUE 1.388

The House voted to make the proposed $20 reduction effective next Jan. 1. In a full year, this cut would be calculated to lose $2,200,000,000 in revenue. In the period between Jan. 1 and July 1, however, the loss has been estimated at only 800 million, and this loss would be avoided if the compromise change in dates were approved.

The House voted to extend for one year the corporation and excise rates which otherwise would drop April 1. These levies now yield about three billion dollars a year.

By extending the present rates three additional months, until July 1, 1956, the Senate Democratic compromise would be calculated to provide about 750 million dollars extra revenue in that three-month period.

Interested Democrats said the proposed July 1, 1956, date for starting the $20 income tax reduction and lowering the corporation and excise levies would force a tax showdown for the Eisenhower administration at the beginning of the presidential campaign.

While he declined to discuss the compromise plan, Smathers made it clear in an interview he would welcome such a showdown.

'Now—for Tomorrow'

By 1980, Million To Make Homes Within 10 Miles of Five Points

By 1980, when an estimated 1,250,000 persons will live in the metropolitan Atlanta area, most of them—at least a million—will make their homes within 10 miles of Five Points.

Suburban residential development will extend beyond Sandy Springs and Dunwoody on the north, Tucker and Stone Mountain on the east, Panthersville on the southeast, and Red Oak on the southwest.

Meanwhile, the population density will increase in many of the already established residential areas and decrease in some others closer to the downtown business district.

These are the predictions of the Metropolitan Planning Commission.

This is the second in a series of articles on the Metropolitan Planning Commission's "Now—for Tomorrow" recommendations for building toward a 1980 Atlanta of 1,250,000 people.

From their long and intensive studies, the planners believe they know approximately where new residential areas will and should be developed.

Patient Has To Stick Out Tongue To Recognize Own Face in Mirror

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif., Feb. 27 (AP)—A man who forgets his own face was described to the San Francisco and Los Angeles Neurological Societies at a joint meeting here by Dr. Donald MacRae, University of California neurologist.

The patient, who received a brain injury in a traffic accident, is suffering from a mind blindness called visual agnosia. He cannot identify his wife in a crowd of people unless she wears an especially striking hat, the neurologist reported.

When he shaves himself, he can assure himself the face in the mirror is his only by sticking out his tongue to make sure the image does the same.

Dr. MacRae said the patient, 32 years old, is able to continue his work at a military installation.

Mysterious Illness Kills Twin Here

A mysterious illness which struck the 2-year-old twin sons of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Aldredge last Friday resulted in the death of one Sunday while the other remained in critical condition at Georgia Baptist Hospital.

Richard Wayne Aldredge died Sunday after being stricken Thursday night by an illness not yet identified by doctors. Members of the family said the twins, grandsons of Fulton County Commissioner James H. Aldredge, suffered upset stomachs and high temperatures Thursday night and Friday morning.

The brother, Michael Lane Aldredge, became ill shortly after Richard and both children were admitted to the hospital Saturday.

Doctors diagnosed the illness as a type of virus which they have not yet positively identified. The symptoms of the children first led the family to believe that it was an upset stomach caused by food poisoning.

The father, of 2815 Queensbury Lane, NW, said Michael's condition remained critical Sunday and that the child had a temperature of 103 degrees. An autopsy was performed on Richard Saturday.

The twins celebrated their second birthday Feb. 17. Surviving besides the parents are grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Aldredge and Mr. and Mrs. L. O. Kimberley, all of Atlanta.

Funeral arrangements will be announced by H. M. Patterson & Son.

Integration Is Pushed by NAACP Here

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People Sunday reiterated that the "target date for school integration within our region is still September, 1955."

According to the NAACP, "The people opposing desegregation in the public schools can't win and they know it."

The organization reaffirmed its stand against segregation during the closing session of the three-day, third annual Southeastern regional conference which ended here Sunday.

Youth Shoots Mother, Kidnaps 2, Kills Self

PERTH AMBOY, N.J., Feb. 27 (AP)—A 20-year-old youth, facing jail or Army service, critically wounded his mother early today, then forced a couple to drive him around five hours before he returned home and killed himself in front of police.

He was Charles Johnson, a stocky, good-looking Army veteran, out of a job and recently convicted of possessing a stolen car.

A Staten Island, N.Y., judge had ordered him to reenlist in the Army by March 11 or face a jail term.

Police said Johnson came home drunk and argued with his mother. An uncle, Harold Johnson, who witnessed the shooting said Charles told his mother: "I know I'm going to get in New York and I don't give a . . . what happens."

"You think this thing won't go off," the youth said, just at the moment his .45-caliber revolver discharged, sending a bullet into his mother's body.

Mrs. Ana Johnson, 43-year-old widow, with whom Charles lived, was wounded above the left breast and is in poor condition at Perth Amboy General Hospital.

When Johnson returned to his home shortly before 8 a.m., after taking a Rumson, N.J., couple on a harrowing ride as far as Camden, N.J., just across the Delaware River, he was met by police.

Police said Johnson came home drunk and argued with his mother. An uncle, Harold Johnson, who witnessed the shooting said Charles told his mother: "I know I'm going to get in New York and I don't give a . . . what happens."

'Summertime' To Linger on Here Tuesday

The weatherman pulled out a summer weight sport shirt after glancing at Georgia's weather forecast for Monday and Tuesday.

The warmest days in four months are expected, with predicted temperatures Monday ranging from 56 to 76, and Tuesday from 58 to 76. The record high for Feb. 28 is 77, made in 1948.

Partly cloudy skies will accompany the mild temperatures, the weatherman said. The last time the mercury touched the high 70's was Oct. 28 when it went to 78 degrees. Sunday's extremes were 50 and 72.

Police Clock Speeding Car At 100 m.p.h.

Five Negroes fleeing police in a "souped-up" car traveling more than 100 miles an hour were killed Sunday night when the car crashed into a bridge on the Expressway just south of Brookwood Station.

Police said the car struck the center pole of the bridge after first striking the Expressway fence, tearing up 76 feet and 10 inches of fence.

The car, a 1951 Mercury sedan, was cut in two by the impact.

ONE OF THE WORST

It was one of the worst crashes in the city's history.

Six persons were killed in other Georgia highway mishaps over the weekend while three Georgians died in wrecks out-of-state.

The dead in the Expressway crash were identified as Arthur Goodman Jr., 36, of 706 Frasier St., SE; Sarah Alice Jinks, 717 Ira St., SE; Emma Jane Jinks Knox, same address; Sarah M. Parks, 28, of 310 Delavan St., SW, and Jimmy Ray Rushin, 24, 342 Arthur St., SW.

These five victims make a total of 18 Atlanta traffic fatalities this year. There were 10 in the same period last year.

LIKE STANDING STILL

Sgt. A. L. Posey, riding in a patrol car, said he first sighted the speeding car at Alexander street and the Expressway about 9:30 p.m. He started in pursuit. "I was doing 90 miles an hour," he said, "and they walked off and left me like I was standing still."

A few minutes later, Ptl. E. A. Samples and R. M. Clark picked up the car at Fourteenth and gave chase. They said they were doing more than 100 miles an hour when the car shot out of sight. It was next seen a demolished wreck, half a mile away from where the car left their vision.

BLOOD SPLATTERS ROAD

Police said the car apparently went out of control on a curve. Pieces of wreckage were scattered over the highway and blood splattered the road in the wreck area.

Bodies of one man and woman were found at the point of impact. Two other women victims' bodies lay in the road near the car. The fifth victim, a man, was in the back seat of the car. Police said the left side of the car was ripped off at the bridge, and the other half scattered a distance of more than 87 feet from the impact point.

2 Americans Released, Talk Red Propaganda

HONG KONG, Feb. 27 (AP)—Two New Yorkers, described by veteran observers of Communist indoctrination as victims of a new high in "brainwashing," came out of Red China singing its praises and their own guilt today.

They were Malcolm Bersohn, 29, and Mrs. Adele Rickett, 35. Arrested for spying in 1951, they arrived by train from Peiping. They said they were called into court 10 days ago, sentenced to 3½ years in prison for espionage, and ordered deported at once since the time already had been served.

Mrs. Rickett's husband, Walter, was reported still in the same prison in Peiping where they were held. She said he still had some time to serve on a term of a length she did not know. But it must have been longer than hers,

'Huge Waste' Found In Medical Services

Hoover Unit Asks Cut In Veteran Programs

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27 (AP)—The Hoover Commission tonight reported a "huge waste" in government medical programs, particularly for veterans, and recommended that they be overhauled and curtailed.

One way or another, the commission said, the government has assumed obligations for full or partial medical care for 30 million persons at a cost of more than four billion dollars a year. Unless something is done, it said, the cost will continue to rise.

It made recommendations to Congress calculated to save more than 250 million dollars annually by coordinating federal medical functions and eliminating some expenditures it said should no longer be assumed by the government.

The medical report, one of the series the commission is making on government reorganization, touched on some points which are highly controversial and are certain to meet objections in Congress.

They include proposals to reduce free medical service for veterans with non-service-connected disabilities and for dependents of military personnel.

Rep. Chet Holifield (D-Calif.), a member of the commission, dissented from both of these recommendations, calling them "wholly unrealistic." He said he also was opposed to any curtailment of hospital and medical facilities "in the face of impending civilian defense needs."

The commission's report was based on the findings of a medical services task force, composed of 16 leaders in the medical profession and headed by the late Chauncey McCormick of Chicago and Dr. Theodore Klumpp of New York. The commission itself is headed by former President Herbert Hoover.

In addition to wasting money through disjointed operation of medical and health programs, the government also drains off physicians and dentists from private practice, the commission said. In 1954, it said, more than 6 per cent of the active medical personnel in the country was employed by the government.

Its major recommendations, which generally followed the task force's suggestions and which will be submitted to Congress tomorrow, included:

1. Creation of a federal advisory council of health to coordinate federal health and medical policies and promote "systematic cross-servicing" among the 66 administrative units having medical functions.

2. Development of a voluntary, contributory system of medical and hospital insurance for civilian employees of the government.

3. Elimination of "gold-bricking" by veterans with non-service-connected disabilities by requiring them to pay their own medical bills when possible; more realistic determination of disability ratings of veterans with service-connected disabilities.

4. Regional coordination of military hospitals operated by the three armed services and cross-servicing in military and veterans administration hospitals.

5. Closing of public health service general hospitals and some clinics plus housing of military and VA units found to be inefficiently operated and not fully utilized.

6. Withdrawal from plans to build any more VA general hospitals except those now under construction or under contract.

7. Elimination of free hospital and medical care for merchant seamen.

The American Legion and other veterans organizations have vigorously fought moves in the past to curtail medical services to veterans whose ailments have no connection with their military service.

VA hospitals now take in such patients when they have the space and when the veterans file affidavits that they cannot afford private care. The affidavits are not subject to investigation.

The commission said these cases provide "the greatest of all problems in the administration of medical care for veterans." It is estimated the 17-500,000 veterans are eligible for hospitalization under the present program.

Prettiest Ears To Reign As Queen of Hi-Fi Bugs

By HERB ALTSCHUL

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27 (AP)—The hi-fi fans will trot out their fanciest super-sound equipment here this week and select a queen with the prettiest ears in town.

How's your eye for ears? The story at right says the judge of a "prettiest ears" contest confesses he is a little confused about it all. Here's a warm-up test for any who might be called upon to do a little judging. These "extracts" from file pictures show ears of famous people. Answers are in the box at lower left.

The body was embalmed and lay in a funeral home, shrinking a bit with each passing year, until it looked like an Egyptian mummy minus wrapping.

In fact, the story goes, the embalmer used to boast—he's dead now—his method was the same "secret" process used on pharaohs and nobles in King Tut's day. It "petrifies," he said.

The brother, E. L. Cochran, 66, of Memphis, sent for the body last week.

He knew where it was all the time, he explained, but never had the money for a proper funeral.

"My wife was after me to tend to it and I wanted to see to him being buried before I die," he added.

M. J. Edwards, part-owner of the funeral home here, said more than 40,000 people had filed through over the past week to view the body, naked in the half-open casket.

"It was an exceptional job of embalming," he said.

U.S. Keeps Close Eye On Islands

Matsu, Quemoy Jitters Mounting

By DANA ADAMS SCHMIDT

New York Times News Service Special to The Atlanta Constitution

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27—While

Secretary of State Dulles is visiting Southeast Asian capitals this week the State Department is keeping him informed of indications of mounting tension over the offshore islands of Matsu and Quemoy.

Intensified Communist shelling of Quemoy, reports of troop movements towards Fochow and Amoy areas and of rapid expansion of fighter bases in the vicinity of this weekend combined to indicate serious Communist intentions of launching an invasion of Matsu and Quemoy. Communist propaganda broadcasts openly asserted that these islands would be taken as stepping stones to the capture of Formosa.

Official statements at Taipei at the same time left no doubt as to the Nationalists' intention to the "two offshore island groups still in their hands."

But what the United States would do if and when the Communists attacked Quemoy and Matsu remained in doubt. State Department officials said the policy was to "keep the Communists guessing."

The trouble with that policy, as was widely remarked among diplomats in the capital, was that it kept U.S. allies guessing too.

Some Asian diplomats maintained that U.S. action in the case of Quemoy would determine the worth, in Asian eyes, of the broad commitments to defend Southeast Asia made by Secretary Dulles at Bangkok. These diplomats expressed disappointment that the United States had not made more precise military and economic commitments in Bangkok.

SPLIT WITH BRITAIN
Representatives of the British commonwealth, all strongly opposed to defense of the offshore islands, expressed concern over what appears to be a split between the U.S. and Britain on this subject.

These diplomats held that the most immediately important event of the Bangkok conference was the private talk between Dulles and Anthony Eden about the offshore islands.

Estimates as to when the Communists would be ready to invade the offshore islands varied greatly. Some observers thought that in order to maintain the momentum set up by Nationalist evacuation of the Tachans and Nanchishan the Communists might strike within a few weeks.

The prevailing view however, was that they would delay operations at least until after the Afro-Asian conference at Bandung in April so as not to appear there in the role of aggressors.

Guns Cover All Quemoy

TAIPEI, Monday, Feb. 28

—Military sources reported today the Communists had set up in new positions heavy Russian-made artillery capable of blanketing all of Quemoy Island with devastating fire.

Heretofore the Red field guns across from Quemoy, the biggest and most heavily defended of the Nationalist outposts, had been able to reach only about half of its defenses. The island's only air strip was outside enemy range.

Responsible quarters here regarded the new threat to Quemoy, where the Nationalist-Communist coastal war started last September with a tremendous bombardment, as a critical development.

They said the Russian 122-millimeter guns firing from their stations near Quemoy could hit vital installations once considered secure by the Nationalist defenders.

The Communists were reported to have been working since last summer on artillery batteries around Quemoy. Now entire artillery battalions were reported moving into the area.

Authoritative sources said probably "hundreds" of big guns were in position to shell the island.

Dulles Says U.S. Will Fight for Laos, But Will Steer Clear of Red Guerrillas

VIENTIANE, Laos, Feb. 27 (AP)

Secretary of State Dulles said today U.S. mobile striking forces will swing into action at once if this tiny kingdom on Red China's border is attacked by "outside aggressors."

Dulles told Crown Prince Savang, however, that Laos will have to look after its own internal security problems—which include the question of the Communist guerrillas who hold two of its provinces.

He said the Russian 122-millimeter guns firing from their stations near Quemoy could hit vital installations once considered secure by the Nationalist defenders.

The Communists were reported to have been working since last summer on artillery batteries around Quemoy. Now entire artillery battalions were reported moving into the area.

Authoritative sources said probably "hundreds" of big guns were in position to shell the island.

They said the Russian 122-millimeter guns firing from their stations near Quemoy could hit vital installations once considered secure by the Nationalist defenders.

2 Formosans Studying Georgia Farm Methods

Two visitors from Formosa expect to "know Georgia and Georgia farm leaders very well" before a six-week tour of this state's agricultural areas is over.

James Chien, executive secretary of the Department of Information, Taiwan Provincial Government, Formosa, and Sheldon Peng, special assistant in the same department, are studying Georgia farm methods under sponsorship of the State department. "Already we have learned a great deal to take home," Peng declared here. Visiting officials hope production methods used in Georgia and other agricultural areas of the United States can be adapted to increase food production in their homeland, where farmers constitute 70 percent of the population.

COPELAND GUIDE

O. B. Copeland, extension specialist from the University of Georgia, is accompanying the visitors. Rice and sugar cane are principal crops of Formosa, Peng reported. Formosa now has 4-H Clubs and other agricultural innovations brought about by the Joint Committee on Rural Reconstruction, agency set up by the United States and the Taiwan Provincial Government.

The visitors plan to spend six months in this country. They will also go to Tennessee, Alabama, Wisconsin, North Carolina and New York.

Peng, a former newspaper editor, has translated several American novels, including Hemingway's "For Whom the Bell Tolls," for readers of his homeland. He reported that novel readers in Formosa loved "Gone With the Wind."

State Guard Is on 'Ready' At All Times

Editors note: This is the fifth in a series of articles on the status and objectives of the various reserve branches of the armed forces.

By JIMMY WALKER

The Georgia National Guard operates around three words: "Ready to Roll."

The guard in wartime is a member of the U.S. Army forces; in peacetime it's a state militia ready to meet local emergencies. This double duty demands the guard be ready.

Headquarters of the Georgia National Guard, now numbering about 10,500 men, is 935 Confederate Ave., where many companies composed of metropolitan Atlantans train one night a week.

Ordinance, signal, infantry, field artillery and medical companies maintain their training quarters at the Confederate Avenue installation. And an Air National Guard squadron maintains flying skill at Dobbins Air Force Base.

To meet the demand that it assume active duty at any time in a national emergency, the Georgia Guard is classified a "Ready Reserve" component. Consequently, members of the guard are subject to call to combat, regardless of their prior service.

But the various companies of the guard are subject to advancement, retirement points, and to young men with no prior service an opportunity to serve with a local unit, by-passing the draft.

OUT OF DRAFT

fore he reaches 18, he's drafted. He's deferred as long as he maintains a satisfactory status in the guard. Regular attendance of drills is the most important requirement for satisfactory conduct.

National Guard enlistees, while attending a two-week camp in summer, also may attend Army specialty schools, such as tank and truck maintenance, electronics and administration. The men are paid regular Army allowances while attending the schools, and upon graduation are sent back to their home units on an organized reserve status.

Three possibilities for promotion to commissioned officer are offered in the Guard, explains Brig. Gen. Homer Flynn, head of the ground forces for the state.

STUDIES TO BE OFFICER

Competition of Army officer correspondence courses is one method. If the man meets the physical requirements and length of service he is commissioned a second lieutenant in the guard.

Attendance at Army Officer Candidate School is another route to a commission. The schools are available to Guardsmen in the summer, and last 8-11 weeks.

The third possibility is a direct commission, given after the man has served in the Guard for a year and has served two years or more on active duty in one of the federal services with a rate of staff sergeant or higher.

Floridan Is Elected By Tech Design Body

Irwin H. Schuster of St. Petersburg, Fla., has been elected president of the Georgia Tech Association of Industrial Design Students. He is a sophomore.

Other officers are Louis Sillay Jr., junior, Atlanta, vice president; William C. MacPherson, junior, Atlanta, secretary, and F. M. Joyner Jr., junior, Suffolk, Va., treasurer.

Labor and Management Probe Distribution Costs

New York Times News Service, Special to The Atlanta Constitution
NEW YORK, Feb. 27—A pioneering labor-management effort will begin Tuesday to cut consumer prices by squeezing waste out of the distribution system.

The powerful International Brotherhood of Teamsters, AFL, often accused of major responsibility for keeping distribution costs high, will be a sponsor of the cooperative effort.

FOUNDATION

It will join with some of the country's best-known corporations in supporting a non-profit research organization, to be known as the Economics of Distribution Foundation. The foundation's aim will be to devise ways to get farm and factory products to the consumer more efficiently and more economically.

Dave Beck, president of the 1,300,000-member truck union, released one of his principal assistants to serve as full-time head of the new foundation. He is David Kaplan, for 14 years the teamsters' chief economist.

The research group will have a board of directors made up of industry, union and civic leaders and an advisory panel of college and university professors. Kaplan said the importance of streamlining the distributive process was highlighted by such instances as these:

It costs more to get an orange from Manhattan's Washington Market to a New York housewife than it does to grow, grade, pack and ship the same orange from California to New York.

It costs more to deliver a quart of milk from a Brooklyn bottling plant to a Flatbush consumer than the combined cost per quart of raising the feed, caring for and milking the cow, transporting the raw milk, pasteurizing it and pouring it into bottles.

It costs more to move bread from a New York bakery to a home in this city than it costs to grow the grain, mill the flour, transport the ingredients to the bakery, mix the dough and bake and wrap the bread.

"These relatively high costs," Kaplan said, "are not due to unconscionable profits, high levels of wages and working conditions, or, as is commonly supposed, to designing middlemen."

"They are caused rather by outmoded methods, obsolete facilities, unsuitable systems of compensation, foolish and outdated competitive practices, and unnecessarily wasteful consumer buying habits, long overdue for a change."

PAUSES FOR TALK

He paused long enough for a sociable talk about the concert he will give with the Atlanta Symphony at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday in Municipal Auditorium.

"The concert is one I spent two days rehearsing in Vienna. But what you hear when you play the record is not that two-day version. What you hear is a happy accident," Curzon said.

Curzon related that he and the Vienna Philharmonic barreled themselves in an Austrian concert hall for two days, recording the concerto slowly, piece-meal, so each section would be note-perfect.

After two days of work they had patched together a recording with which they were reasonably satisfied.

JUST FOR FUN

"Now let's play it all through once just for fun," Curzon told the orchestra.

They did. Unknown to Curzon and the orchestra, an engineer left the recording machines going.

"The rendition we did for pleasure was the better of the two, so that is the one they made into the record," Curzon said.

Curzon is nearing the end of the longest, most tiring concert tour of his career. He arrived in the United States in November and has been crisscrossing the country to fill concert dates ever since.

He wistfully spoke of his stone farmhouse hideaway on the mountainous Scotch-English border "where you can stay a week and never see a person, except maybe a shepherd in the distance." But he stoutly maintained that the opportunity to play in America was more than worth the trouble of traveling.

3,000 CHEER

McDowell Is Fine With Symphony

By ALEX JOINER JR.

Close to 3,000 persons took advantage of Sunday afternoon's balmy weather to attend the Atlanta Symphony's family concert at the municipal auditorium.

Michael McDowell, head of the music department at Agnes Scott College, was soloist in an altogether commendable performance of Liszt's "Concerto in E Flat" for piano and orchestra.

The orchestra, for its part, played Purcell's "Trumpet Voluntary," the finale of Franck's Symphony in D Minor, St. Saen's "Danse Macabre," Romberg's "Desert Song" and the Prelude to Act III of Wagner's "Lohengrin."

Concert-master Robert Harrison did a praiseworthy job of the solo violin passages in the St. Saen's work.

Sunday's was the fourth of five of the free concerts, sponsored by Colonial Stores. The remaining one comes April 3, when Don Gillis, producer of Toscanini's NBC Symphony shows, will be guest conductor. Tickets to the concert are available at Colonial Stores.

The Future's Key Lies in Planning

Atlanta owes its existence to its location. But it owes its preeminence in many fields to the people who live here.

The city was founded because the lay of the land dictated that here railroad lines must meet. It owes its present size and many advantages to the enterprise of its population and the vision of its leaders. What Atlanta will be tomorrow depends on the will of the people.

Sunday, Albert Riley of the Constitution staff commenced a phase by phase analysis of the Metropolitan Planning Commission's latest report. It is a master plan for the development of the Atlanta Metropolitan Area. Titled "Now-for-Tomorrow," it is a splendid presentation.

Barring cataclysms, the report forecasts a population by 1980 of at least 1,250,000, a reasonably conservative estimate when the growth of the recent past is considered.

The test of a city is not in its size, but in its convenience and livability. Atlanta is fortunate in that it is not hemmed in by water and mountains. With proper planning it can grow spaciouly.

The planning commission's new report suggests ways by which the city's growth can be controlled. It recommends methods by which the downtown area can be kept alive and functioning, not only as the center of this metropolitan area but as the heart of the entire Southeast. There are plans for the control of traffic, for the development of air rights over the railroads, for new parks, and new residential and industrial areas.

As cities count their age, Atlanta is young. Its period of greatest growth is only commencing. It is fortunate that it can avoid the mistakes made by older cities, for Atlanta still is in the formative stage and can be anything it wants.

The Metropolitan Planning Commission's idea of what the Atlanta of the future should be is exciting. In the final analysis however, it is only a guide. Whether the city grows into an orderly, pleasant metropolis, or whether it becomes a place of snarling confusion, strangled by its own unplanned growth, is up to the people of the city.

The Reasoning Behind Ike's Road Proposals

In considering the massive nature of President Eisenhower's road-building proposal, all levels of government have invested a total of only $23,000,000,000 in highway improvements in the last 10 years. In the next decade, the President proposes more than four times that figure.

The 1953 expenditures of $3,729,000,000 would be increased to nearly three times that under the new program. We would be spending $5,000,000,000 more on roads each year for the next decade than the 1953 figure.

Is the program justified? The Bureau of Public Roads and the President's advisory commission, among others, think so.

They point out that we have barely built our road investment back to what it was prior to the war, while use and demand have gone far ahead. During the same period, there has been an increase of 87 per cent in the number of registered vehicles and the number is increasing at the rate of more than 2,000,000 a year. There will be 80,000,000 vehicles on the roads by 1965 and 100,000,000 by 1975.

To raise our depreciated highway system per vehicle to prewar standards would require an investment of $75,000,000 by 1965, say these experts. If we are to take care of added vehicular traffic, the investment will have to be much larger.

The proposal is justified in another way, too—in reduction of traffic deaths and in cutting transportation costs. On the basis of deaths per 100,000 population, there has been an increase since 1945 of from 21.2 to 24.2.

The program is massive but the careful survey on which it is based shows that it will merely meet the actual needs. It will bring the nation's roads in relation to vehicles up to prewar standards. It is designed to overcome the static depression years as well as the war years in which road building was at a standstill.

Millen, Jenkins County Go All Out for Industry

The up-and-coming city of Millen in Jenkins County is out to get a share of the new industry coming into Georgia. It is an ambition that is shared by most Georgia counties and communities, but Millen and Jenkins want to do something about it.

Forty-eight of the town's citizens visited the Georgia Department of Commerce the other day to present their case. They described in detail what the town has to offer—electric power, gas, water, railroad and highway facilities, climate, a healthy citizenry, schools and churches.

They were listened to with courtesy and interest. The Central of Georgia Railroad and two Atlanta banks offered to help them to make a complete survey of their potential. After this is completed, Millen will know its capacities and what it must do to improve them. And any interested industry can be presented with facts and figures.

Communities that have been successful in getting industry have left nothing to chance. They know their potential and how to sell it. The advice to Millen and Jenkins County would apply to any community in Georgia.

We commend these forward-looking citizens for their determination to build a balanced community. Such determination can but be rewarded with success.

America Is Strangling In Miles of Red Tape

Red tape, paper work and as many copies of everything as possible have been synonymous with government since paper became available in quantity.

The Hoover Commission, which has been studying federal procedure in an effort to effect economy in government, has issued a report on the enormous amount of paper used annually by the bureaucrats. The commission estimated that paper work costs the taxpayers about $4,000,000,000 a year and that an economy program could save at least $250,000,000.

The report contains some startling facts. The government, for instance, uses enough paper each year to reach from here to the moon 13 times. Three quarters of a million people devote their full time to paper handling. Space to house these paper shufflers has a rental value of $180,000,000 a year, and space to store these records would fill a file drawer extending from Washington to Moscow.

The commission has been doing splendid work in discovering overlapping functions and waste in our huge federal bureaucracy. Many of its recommendations have been carried out with considerable savings to the taxpayers. Incidentally, the commission estimated that all this paper work costs the average family of four $100 a year in taxes.

The commission has urged a big reduction in the torrents of paper that flow from Washington each year. The taxpayers heartily concur, not only for reasons of economy but as a time and nerve saver. Filling out the government's many forms and translating governmentese into understandable English, costs the taxpayers additional millions and wear and tear each year that the commission touched on but lightly.

Red Regimes Depend On Tension to Survive

It is apparent that the new Soviet regime is in full support of the Red Chinese and is promoting the current tension in the Formosa Straits. Mao's blustering, threatening speech recently—an outright threat of atomic war against the United States—is proof enough of that. Bulganin's assurances clinch it.

The threat was not only against the United States but against West Europe as well. The entire scheme is to be played on a worldwide basis. The Red Chinese campaign will continue while the Soviet Union attempts to split the United States and its European allies by threats of atomic war against them.

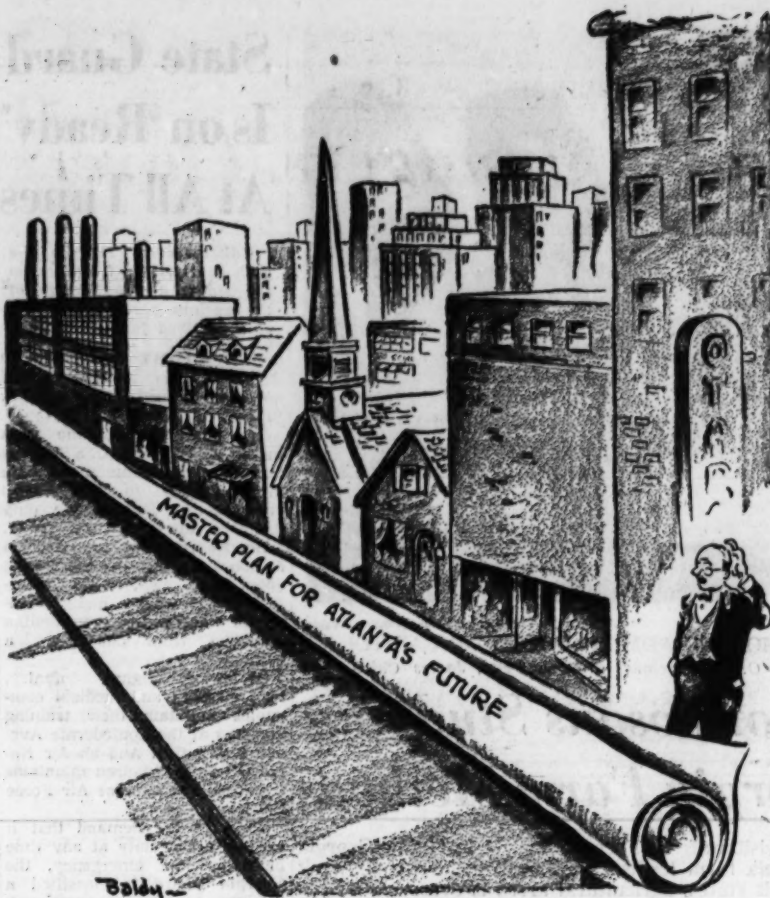

Communist foreign policy is still designed to split the Western alliance, to prevent rearmament of West Germany, to gain Red China a seat in the UN, and to win Formosa. These are preludes to their bigger schemes of world domination.

Internally, the Communists will continue to frighten their own people into submission by constant propaganda against the United States' "aggression." They will play the theme that America plans an atomic war against them. The Reds will sustain themselves and their demands for more and more sacrifices from their people by going back to Stalin's internal tactics of a perpetual state of emergency.

This is borne out by an interview with Nikolai E. Khoklov, former top Soviet secret agent who deserted to the West, in an interview in the Feb. 14 issue of U.S. News and World Report. Discussing the Kremlin's shakeup, he says:

"You must convince the Soviet people that they are one day going to have to fight, because the West is an aggressive enemy. This is an old trick, one that Stalin has used many times. And now, once again, it has been proven that there is only one way to maintain the Soviet system—only one way—and this is by using the idea of inevitable conflict between the Soviet state and the Western democracies."

The new Russian "team," say the experts, is going back to that Stalinist concept. They doubt if the Reds are willing to risk major war but the world will continue in a state of jitters indefinitely. We must be patient and ready.

Women Voters' Official Says City Pay Rate Is Concern of Aldermen, Not Legislature

Atlanta—The League of Women Voters of Atlanta is not in a position to say whether or not the raises granted in the closing hours of the Legislature to certain city department heads and employees were deserved.

We do say, however, that it is the prerogative of the Board of Aldermen, and not of the four members of the Fulton County legislative delegation, to set the pay of city employees. Certainly the custom of passing last-minute legislation without the knowledge of the people or opportunity for an expression of their opinion is undemocratic.

By the same token, it is poor governmental procedure for our four legislators to make changes involving expenditures after the budget of the city of Atlanta has been passed and then expect the Finance Committee and the Board of Aldermen to administer them. We consider the Omnibus Bill a custom deserving strong condemnation. The city budget for 1955 has already been adopted after most careful consideration by the Finance Committee of the Board of Aldermen and with knowledge of the duties and qualifications of city employees. Any adjustment of salary schedules should be made by the Aldermen.

This is particularly true of the salaries of employees under the Merit System. There is no excuse for singling out for raises 20 employees who are on civil service pay schedules.

If the legislative delegation seriously contemplates that the Board of Aldermen will avail themselves of the provision of the law which permits them to return to the old salary schedule after one month, they have in effect granted a bonus to certain chosen employees. If that was not their intent, they have taken upon themselves a right which belongs to the Board of Aldermen.

This is indeed another strong argument for Home Rule. The League urges the Board of Aldermen to exercise those powers of Home Rule which they have.

U.S. Should Resume Free Coinage of Gold

Newark, N.J.—The San Francisco mint will evidently be closed soon as an economy measure. According to a bulletin issued by the Treasury, it costs too much to make money. As an alternate it not time we resumed the free coinage of gold. Just as other countries now make the unlimited sale of gold coins available to the public.

Indignation Expressed At 'Law Enforcement'

Atlanta—We, the undersigned, do hereby express our indignation and disgust at what appears to be rottenness to the very core in our system of law enforcement. The 16-year-old son of a "prominent Atlantian" admits setting off the dynamite explosions which terrorized an entire neighborhood. Having made a hysterical confession, he is permitted to remain in the custody of his "prominent" father, who must be a prominent man indeed for the law to be set aside in his favor.

In the past, people have been jailed for setting off fireworks. We are also somewhat disappointed with the Constitution for its failure to reveal the name of the boy. In the past we are quite sure that the names of similar and lesser offenders have been published, but perhaps they were not members of prominent families.

The Constitution delicately stated that the dynamite was "taken" from a construction project. We can only assume that it was stolen. We are of the opinion that petit larceny, burglary, or whatever term is applicable, is a crime punishable not at the discretion of the officers, or according to a person's prominence, but by the courts.

Editor's Note: Publication of the names of juvenile offenders under 17 is prohibited by law. The Constitution has no authority to decide who should have custody of any lawbreaker; that's the job of the courts. Until possession of the dynamite is definitely determined to be theft, libel laws prevent a newspaper from proclaiming it as such.

St. Louis Post-Dispatch

The story of how an Illinoisan hunting deer in Wisconsin with a local resident's hunting license was trapped, $107.50 worth, when a game warden became suspicious of his Southern accent, has got us buffaloed. Where did Virgil Williamson of Murphysboro, Ill., get that Southern accent? The Associated Press, usually as full of questions as the announcer on a give-away program, apparently forgot to ask that one.

Of course Mr. Williamson may have been born in the South and come by the accent lawfully. Or he may have lived in the South for a time, and acquired squatter's rights to the accent. Knowing, as we do, the babel of Southern accents, however, we would make a shrewd guess otherwise. Georgians think South Carolinians talk funny. Tennesseans hold similar views toward Virginians, and practically everybody north of Amarillo thinks Texas talk is downright peculiar.

So our guess would be that the Wisconsin game warden, perhaps in common with many of his commonwealth, regards as Southern any accent coming from south of the Mason-Dixon line. (Our reference, naturally, being an imaginary line drawn between Mason, Mich., and Dixon, Mont.)

From the time Carl Rountree bought the Dawson News nine years ago, he searched diligently for a copy of the first newspaper printed in Terrell County. The Dawson publisher struck paydirt the other day. Among the old papers gathered dust in the basement vault of the Terrell County ordinary's office, he found Volume 1, Number 1, of the Dawson Weekly Journal.

This first paper was published Feb. 2, 1866, 14 months after Appomattox. Printed on paper made from rags, not wood, the copy is in a good state of preservation.

The fact of the discovery is important to Carl. "One of the really happy experiences of my newspaper career," he says in reporting the find. The fact that the files are complete from the first edition on is important to the Terrell County historian.

But what I think is most interesting about that Volume 1, Number 1, is the inaugural statement of the publishers, Elam and J. E. Christian.

They said editorially, "We shall endeavor to make our paper acceptable to politicians of every stripe, Christians of every denomination, mechanics, artists and planters of every description and trust we shall receive their assistance in building up such a newspaper as will attract the attention of the capitalist and the emigrant and make all the elements of a rich region of country known to the world."

Evidently, the Christian brothers were playing it safe like the publisher who told his young editor what not to write about, then added significantly, "You can give the Chinese hell. There's only one in town."

The road to pleasing "politicians of every stripe" and "Christians of every denomination" must have been rocky. The early Terrell County paper had 14 separate owners and almost as many names in its first 23 years. In 1889 E. L. Rainey bought it and changed the name to the Dawson News. Since then, the paper has had only two more owners, the late Clem Rainey and the present publisher. Since then, the name has been the same.

Important Part Is To Say the Prayer

In this column a week or so ago I quoted one of the petitions of The Lord's Prayer as: "And forgive us our trespasses" (Matthew 6:12). A half-dozen or more letters came saying, "My Bible says, 'Forgive us our debts.' Why do you change the word?" Still others wrote suggesting that the truer meaning of the prayer would be expressed by praying "Forgive us our sins."

By way of explanation, it may be pointed out that the word "trespasses" comes from an older translation and was in use in some churches long before our King James Version was given us. It isn't that any church has changed the translation of The Bible that most people read today, rather it is that some churches did not change their prayer to conform with the later translation in the year 1611.

However, as I study that petition it seems to me that it would be good to use all three words because each gives part of the thought I feel sure The Lord had in mind. The word "debt" suggests failure to discharge obligations. Not only financial, there are also such debts as the debts of friendship, citizenship and many others. Where is there one among us who has discharged his debts to his fellow man? "Forgive us for leaving undone the things we ought to have done," is a prayer we all need to pray.

"Trespasses" indicate unlawful use of what belongs to another. We see signs, "No Trespassing," which means to keep off. Listen to the conversation of almost any group and more often than not you will hear someone's good name being trespassed upon. The other day I saw a car run through a red light and hit another car. There was a man trespassing on the rights of another. In many ways we misuse what belongs to someone else.

"Sin" means wrong and we recall the words of Christ, "He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone at her" (John 8:7). That will cause any of us to turn and walk away because as the Bible says, "All have sinned, and come short of the glory of God" (Romans 3:23). No matter which of the three words you choose to use, certainly the important thing is to pray that prayer.

In fact, this is the only petition the Lord emphasized. He made no further comment at that time in regard to the coming of God's kingdom of our need for bread, but He did feel it necessary to say after the prayer was completed, "For if ye forgive men their trespasses, your Heavenly Father will also forgive you. But if ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses" (Matt. 6:14, 15).

Never forget, the words "forgiving" and "forgiveness" are forever linked together. Unless we forgive, we will never be forgiven. It is hard, but it is true.

Rockefeller Studies 'Grain for Russia'

WASHINGTON—At the direction of President Eisenhower, Nelson A. Rockefeller, special White House assistant, is exploring with all agencies of the government the proposal that some of the nation's vast wheat surplus be given to the Soviet people, to relieve emergency suffering due to the Kremlin-admitted breakdown in its farm program.

Rockefeller is the newly appointed coordinator of United States psychological strategy, succeeding C. D. Jackson, and as such is a prime architect in developing cold-war programs.

It is evident that President Eisenhower has personally interested himself in the idea of making a gesture of good will directly to the Russian people by offering them some relief from food shortages, if the Kremlin will permit them to have the wheat.

Rockefeller's assignment is to make a full-scale study of the project in order to equip the President and the Cabinet with all the arguments, pro and con, so that an early administration decision can be made.

At the moment the administration is seeking: To determine whether any special legislation would be required to use government-owned surplus wheat in this manner. The probability is that present legislation is adequate.

To decide whether wheat could be offered to the Soviet people in a quantity sufficient to alleviate immediate distress without strengthening the Soviet economy; in other words, is it practical to try to help the Russian people without helping the Russian dictatorship?

Along Came Sam With His Tax Cut

WASHINGTON—The politician's life is an uneasy one. That goes for members of Congress who are constantly on exhibition in the big goldfish bowl which is the Capitol Building.

They have just voted themselves an increase in pay. Many are feeling squeamish about that. Any time is a ticklish time to vote yourself more pay. But they thought they had picked the best. The bills were brought forward in House and Senate at the beginning of a new session of Congress, many months away from the next election, far enough away so that most voters would forget about it, it is hoped.

But then, alas, along came Speaker Sam Rayburn of the House with his $20 across-the-board tax cut project for every taxpayer and every dependent in the taxpayer's family. When this was brought up for action in the House, that body, as well as the Senate, already had voted themselves a pay raise.

President Eisenhower and Secretary of Treasury Humphrey were outspoken against the tax cut. But members, who have to vote—unlike those two gentlemen—found themselves on a spot. It is right embarrassing after you have voted yourself a handsome raise in salary to deny a small measure of relief to the taxpayer.

Even though it is clear that these are entirely separate matters and should be considered on their individual merits.

Certainly a boost in salaries of members of Congress is long overdue, that is, considering the important part they have in the management of the biggest business in the world, which is what the government of the United States now is, and considering the need for capable men in this area of government. Political timidity long has delayed this matter of simple economic justice and sound common sense. But Congress, bolstered by a report by a special commission, finally screwed up enough spunk.

We who live here year after year and observe members of Congress closely know the demands made upon them, the higher cost of living here than in so many other communities, and the difficult problems they face, and the industry of most of them in their jobs. But we discover also that this is not always so well known back home and that the new salary is going to look mighty "upper bracket" to many of their constituents.

Roscoe Drummond

He has found divergent opinions among top-level officers of the government. Indications are that the Department of Agriculture would favor the proposal. The present consensus at the State Department appears to be against it.

Reports that the White House is considering a vast food give-away program to Russia, running into millions of tons of wheat costing more than a billion dollars, are without foundation.

Those who have advocated the proposal to the President feel that it would be a healthy demonstration of what free farmers can do to offer something off the top of a free-world surplus to a people suffering from a government-produced food deficit.

Rockefeller is due to have his report ready in a few days and the President's decision will follow shortly.

The Friendly Grocer

I was overwhelmed by warm sentimental flushes the other day when I read the story that old Preacher, or Elwin Charles, Roe is going to become a groceryman. A small-town groceryman. I looked at the picture of him standing behind the counter, wearing that butcher's apron, weighing a batch of bananas, and I thought it was great.

I thought that there was no other job old Preacher would look as good doing as tending a small-town grocery store. Even pitching. He always did look more like a small-town grocer to me than a pitcher, with those spindly legs and that little bean of a head.

I don't mean that the way it sounds. I know a lot of small-town grocers that have got big legs and large heads, and a midriff to match. What I mean is, that ever since old Preacher has been around the majors he's always looked like the home-folks kind, and better than that, he's acted like it.

If you live in a small town, you know what I mean by that. That grocer is an awfully important man in your life. First and foremost, he's got to be a philosopher to be a good grocer. He's got to be a psychologist, amateur, of course, because he's got to stay friendly with everybody in town, even the folks who go to church with him on Sunday but trade at the store across the street. Psychology is just a hard word to spell for him, but he's one even if it's news to him.

That's why old Preacher ought to be a dad-blamed good small-town grocer. He always was a philosopher, the home-made kind, and he was a character in Brooklyn because of it.

Usually in Brooklyn they expect their characters to indulge in three-man traffic jams at the same base, or get skulled by fly balls, or try to go through fences where there aren't any doors. Old Preacher was a character because he was old Preacher.

Ash Flat, a Place With Trees

He'd chew his cud with those lantern jaws of his, and he'd look you in the eyes real friendly-like, and he'd spit and he'd talk to you like one of those Ozark mountain boys. That must have fooled a lot of folks who didn't know how smart Preacher is.

This is how smart he is: Back in the days when Sam Breadon and Branch Rickey ran the St. Louis Cardinals and were signing boys for $100 and $200 bonuses, old Preacher charged them $5,000 for his signature.

The thing I like most about Preacher's self-removal to that grocery store in West Plains, Mo., is that it represents a fellow who's found his peace with the world. You see, these individuals who play baseball get used to the cheers, the petting hand of the public, the bigtime pace and the baying of the autograph hounds. It makes it seem like an awful long way from Ebbetts Field to West Plains, not in miles, but in the kind of stuff you can't measure.

Maybe this gives you the idea better. Old Preacher was born in Ash Flat, Ark. Now, if you live in Brooklyn, Ash Flat sounds like one of those New Jersey meadows where they dump the ashes from the city boilers. If you're from Arkansas, or West Plains, which isn't far away, Ash Flat is a little community where a lot of ash trees grow.

Ash Flat, you see, never did become a Jersey meadow or a city dump to old Preacher. It always was a little community where ash trees grow.

Five Cents Profit at His Christening

I'd like to think that Proprietor Roe will have a pot-bellied stove in his store. I don't guess he will, because the story classified his new establishment as a supermarket. They've been the durned ruin of the grocery business.

Time was when a fellow could go downtown to the grocery store, pull up an old cane-bottomed chair and spit in the sandbox and whistle a little while the old philosopher rustled up some staples to take back to the old lady. This doesn't eliminate Preacher's philosophizing, but it does cut down on the attractiveness of his establishment to the loitering trade.

The thing that makes you know everything's all right with old Preacher is that he became a grocer voluntarily. He didn't sign that $21,000 contract with Baltimore and go back to spring training one more time to find that the gravy was gone out of his soupbone. He had the courage to face it alone behind the counter in West Plains, Mo.

Old Preacher'll make good. He always was a right smart money man. He even made a nickel at his christening.

"Bet you a nickel you can't tell me your name," a fond uncle asked him when he was a little boy.

Elwin Charles thought a moment, then said: "Preacher."

Aw, c'mon," said the uncle. "Tell me your name."

Elwin Charles thought a moment, then said: "Preacher."

The uncle backed up a little, but he stuck to his agreement. "Okay, Preacher," he said, "here's your nickel."

And Elwin Charles has been Preacher ever since.

GRAPEFRUIT REBUILDING STARTS TUESDAY

Rookie Managers, Players To Give Majors 'New Look'

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Feb. 27 (AP)—Evidence is heavy that the spring training season which gets under way Tuesday will be one of the keenest in major league history in rebuilding, retooling and retooling.

Stimulated by the biggest managerial shakeup ever to take place in a single year, the grapefruit season promises to present a "new look" featured by the finest array of freshman talent ever to make a concentrated push for big league berths.

All 16 clubs, seven under new leadership, will begin action March 1 in accordance with the rule adopted at the players' request which bars earlier drills. Each club boasts several outstanding newcomers with excellent minor league records that guarantee them at least a long and thorough trial.

Thirteen teams, one more than last year, will train in Florida. The others, the Chicago Cubs, and the defending champion New York Giants and Cleveland Indians remain in Arizona.

Two clubs will use new training sites. The Baltimore Orioles, who drilled at Yuma, Ariz., last spring, have switched to Daytona Beach, while the Pittsburgh Pirates have shifted from Fort Pierce to Fort Myers. Kansas City, back in the American League after a 54-year absence, will retain the West Palm Beach camp occupied by the Philadelphia Athletics.

The rookies regarded to have the best chances of sticking include Herb Score, Indians; Elston Howard, Yankees; Hal Smith, Orioles; Bobby Kline, Senators; Norm Zaichin, Red Sox; Frank Lary, Tigers; Hector Lopez, Athletics; Jim Marshall, White Sox; Ken Boyer and Bill Virdon, Cardinals; Karl Spooner and Chico Fernandez, Dodgers; Bob Lennon, Giants; Jim Owens, Phillies; Roberto Clemente and Gene Freese, Pirates; Sam Jones, Cubs; Ray Crone, Braves, and Jim Pearce, Redlegs.

No manager is free of problems, including the two who met in the World Series last October. Leo Durocher, standing pat with his world champion Giants, frankly admits he needs more pitching in order to repeat. Al Lopez, slowly recovering from the shock of four straight defeats by the Giants, is depending upon Ralph Kiner, the former National League home run king, to supply the much needed long ball.

Casey Stengel must find replacements for the retired Allie Reynolds on the mound and the departed Gene Woodling in the outfield. Paul Richards, in his new job handling the assorted seventh place headaches of the Orioles, is building a team comprised of veteran castoffs and inexperienced freshmen. Pinky Higgins, brought in from Louisville to replace Lou Boudreau, may have the biggest headache of all in Boston if Ted Williams retires.

Eddie Stanky realizes better than anyone else that right-handers Brooks Lawrence and Gordon Jones must repeat their fine '54 rookie performances if his Cardinals are to become a pennant contender.

Rookie manager Mayo Smith of the Phillies is happy with his pitching but he is searching for another hardhitting outfielder and a second baseman.

The broken legs of Bobby Thomson and Hank Aaron must be fully mended to make the Braves a definite pennant threat. Roy Campanella's left hand and Don Newcombe's right arm are the keys to the Dodgers' championship hopes. The Cubs and Pirates are in the process of rebuilding.

The White Sox, who finished 17 games out of first place, need more power. They may get it from Walter Dropo and Clint Courtney and have the advantage of having George Kell from the start of the season. Charlie Dressen inherits a difficult situation in Washington. Kline, up from Birmingham, may plug the shortstop gap, but Dressen needs hitting badly, especially in the outfield. The pitching-plagued Tigers have gathered 17 new hurlers into camp.

Hot Souchak Sizzles Again

Posts 273 at Houston For Second Record Win

HOUSTON, Feb. 27 (AP)—Big Mike Souchak of Durham, N.C., fired a seven-under-par 65 today to win $6,000 in top money in the $30,000 Houston Open, richest tournament on the winter tour.

Souchak's 65 and earlier rounds of 70, 71 and 67 gave him a 15-under-par 273 for the 7,200-yard Memorial Park course. It left him two strokes ahead of little Jerry Barber, Los Angeles, who placed a final round 71 with his record-breaking 63 of yesterday for a 275 total and $3,500 in second money.

A former football star at Duke University, Souchak had no bogies today while compiling rounds of 33-32 to run his money winnings in two weeks to $8,500, having won $2,500 at the Texas Open champ a week ago.

His 273 also set a new record at Memorial, where the Houston Open never before has been won by a lower score than 277.

"I got off to a good start and was putting very well," Souchak said. "So I just kept putting and praying to the good Lord."

Making the turn at three-under-par, Souchak had scored birdies with a one-foot putt on the fifth green, by two-putting on the eighth and by sinking a 20-footer on the ninth.

Another 20-footer on No. 10 made him four-under-par, and he closed by sinking birdie putts of 5, 5 and 10 feet on the thirteenth, sixteenth and seventeenth greens.

Jack Burke Jr., the 1953 winner here, and Shelley Mayfield, Chicopee, Mass., finished in a tie at 278 for third place. Each posted a 69 for the final round and each picked up a check for $2,000.

Barber, whose first rounds were 70 and 71, had a two-over-38 on the front nine. He rallied after the turn for 71 but Souchak's pressure had become too great.

On the final green, Barber missed by inches a 20-foot putt that would have kept him alive but Souchak promptly clinched the jackpot by sinking a two-footer.

Hillman Robbins, the National Collegiate champion from Memphis, 37, had rounds of 71-67-73 and 72 for a four-under-par 284 to finish as low amateur.

COLUMBUS COOKED THE BAKERS' GOOSE—WILDCATS FRIED THE IMPS

By CHARLIE ROBERTS

Columbus took care of its own, and Russell High of East Point took care of Columbus. That's the short, short story of top highlights of the GHSAA 1955 state Class AA high school basketball tournament, sponsored by The Constitution, at the city auditorium last week.

The smashing of Columbus Baker, and putting an end to its fabulous winning streak at 40 consecutive games, by Bernard Hancock's Columbus High Imps is destined to remain one of the year's top feats. It was doubly gratifying to the Blue Devils, doubly galling to the Lions, because a bitter cross-town rival was involved.

Coach Charlie Aldridge's Russellites did more than just break a four-city, 34-year monopoly on GHSAA cage championships and snap a jinx that has kept all Region 4-AA teams from the winner's circle all these years.

The Fulton County boys thrashed at least one team from each of the other three regions enroute to the crown. Benedictine of 2-AA fell, 59-36. North Fulton's Atlanta City League (3-AA) champs, rated right along with Baker's defending champs as the team to beat, tumbled, 73-48. That was as much of a shocker as Columbus' 50-43 semifinals' victory over Baker.

Russell clipped 1-AA's LaGrange, 55-50, and then Columbus, 65-57. The wily Aldridge, who had said, "We'll have to win this year or wait quite a while, I'm afraid," got the job done in a manner reminiscent of Roy Rowlett and his "Iron Men" Atlanta Browns that capped the state crown in 1952.

Four of Aldridge's five "Iron Men," who did virtually all the playing, hit in double figures for four tournament games. Neal Marchbanks, whose omission from the all-tournament team set up a possibly justifiable hue and cry, plunked in 66 points for a 16.5 average. Guard Jimmy Stanley, whose great floor play and court craft won him the MVP trophy, had a 15.5 average on 62 points.

Big Tommy Redmond, a six-fiver like Marchbanks, had 54 points and a 13.5 average. And his great defensive play was responsible for holding North Fulton's Joe Milner and LaGrange's Wayne Copeland, two of the best, to 12 and six points. Redmond, Marchbanks and Stanley dominated backboard play throughout.

Roy Quinn tossed in 43 points for a 10.8 average. Norman (Dink) Vaughn, Aldridge's finest defensive performer, hurt North Fulton most. He bagged most of his 10 points in early game and limited star Joe Marco to 13 points. Robert Johnson and Harold McDonald did some fine clutch work in the finals after Redmond and Vaughn fouled out. Quinn and Johnson are the only proven performers who will return to aid in a title defense next year.

TOURNEY BACKLASH—Russell, 4-AA league champ but third-place tourney finisher, won 28, lost 5. Losses were to Griffin (2), North Fulton, Sylva and Columbus. Russell had beaten Columbus, 73-61, and lost to Columbus 66-61, in overtime in regular season. For Baker, whose "Winner's Circle Revisited" plans went awry, there was solace in Lee's being the meet's high-point man. He had 84 points in four games for a 21.0 average. Savannah's Walt Rabhan had the top average, 28.0 in two games.

Columbus had been "that ornery" once before when Bernard Hancock was a player, not a coach. In 1944 Columbus beat Jordan by one point for the state title after losing five straight to Jordan over a two-year span. Aldridge said if LaGrange had five like that "thieving" Bobby Harris we never would have reached the finals. Harris hit 29 against Russell. Coaches say guard Joe George is the Columbuser who beat Baker. He hit six of six fouls in the fourth quarter, nine for nine in all. Russell's Neal Marchbanks, Columbus' Jake McWatney, Baker's Amos Ivey and Foster Watkins, LaGrange's Wayne Copeland, Murphy's Norman King and Smith's Bobby Braden were others who got support for all-tourney team spots—other than those who made it.

Official attendance figures have not been compiled, but Business Manager George O'Kelley says paid attendance is over 10,000 for the third straight year of Constitution sponsorship.

Titleholders Meet 'Arrives' This Year

Gets Under Way in Augusta
March 10 as Ladies' Best

By BERT PRATHER

Barring interference from the weatherman, the 16th Women's Titleholders golf tournament which cranks up a week from next Thursday at Augusta Country Club should be the finest show in women's golf. That's what the Titleholders Golf Association started out to make this tournament back in 1937. And this year they have arrived.

Styled after the famed Masters, which is played on the adjoining Augusta National Golf Club, the Titleholders started out with a small select field and an equally small cash purse for the professionals to battle over.

Due to the strict entrance requirements and the comparatively few pros during the early days, it was a struggle.

The tourney came into the big leagues following World War II and has been on the upgrade ever since.

This year the Titleholders group upped its purse to $5,000, thus assuring the entry of all the leading lady pros. And due to spreading interest in golf and more big tournaments, there are many more amateurs who are now eligible to play. This should insure a record entry for '55.

The fans have not been forgotten, either, in the planning for this year's classic. A golf clinic, featuring 15 of the world's greatest professionals, will be staged day before the opening ground in this 72-hole medal play event. On this day all Augusta grammar school pupils will be admitted free.

For the tournament proper, all military personnel (in uniform) may purchase daily tickets for half price.

Also included in the "new look" at this year's classic will be the addition of bus service to various vantage points on the course for galleries who do not feel up to climbing the hills.

Improvement of playing conditions have not been overlooked either. Since last year's tourney a complete underground watering system has been installed, which should make for more lush fairways.

Atlanta's Louise Suggs, whose 293 last year established a new tournament record, will head the star-studded field.

Skip Hogan Bowls Way To Duck Pin Diadem

Skip Hogan started fast, rolling 165 and 140 in his first two games, and finished the same way to nail down the Metropolitan Duck Pin Championship at the Lucky Strike Alleys Sunday. Hogan's winning ten-game series score was 1286.

Martha Cleveland topped 887 pins in the eight-game women's division competition on Saturday to lead a field of seven ladies trying for that crown. Cleveland's card read 90-98-112-147-95-142-90-112—887.

Hogan led second-place Doyal Darden by six with games of 165-140-107-126-139-96-106-134-159-115—1286. Others who finished in the money were Billy Allen (1272), Jack Malone (1256) and Dick Nelson (1247).

Cash collectors in the women's division were Cleveland, Evelyn Traber (877), Madeleine Pearce

OFFICIAL AWARD -- UNOFFICIAL REWARD -- ONE MVP HAILS ANOTHER

Helping Russell High win its first state Class AA basketball championship in the GHSAA and Constitution-sponsored tournament was honor enough to East Point's Jimmy Stanley. But Saturday night, after the finals victory over Columbus, more honors were heaped upon him. Here's pictorial evidence. At left, Constitution Sports Editor Furman Bisher congratulates the top Wildcat star upon being named the meet's most valuable player. Center, the trophy's forgotten as Linda Groover rewards with a kiss. Right, Baker's brilliant Jimmy Lee, 1954 MVP, adds his congratulations.

Sanders 272 GW Record

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION
TALLAHASSEE, Fla., Feb. 27.—Doug Sanders, University of Florida sophomore from Cedar-town, Ga., captured the ninth annual George Washington's Birthday golf tournament here Sunday afternoon with a record-breaking 272 for the 72-hole medal play event.

His record total Sunday erased the old mark of 288, established in 1933 when Hobart Manley, Savannah, Ga., beat Dan Sikes, Jacksonville, and Sonny Timney, Tallahassee, in a "sudden death" playoff after tying at the end of regulation 72 with 288.

Pat Schwab, University of Florida teammate, was second to Sanders with a total of 275.

The low scorers:

Minnesota-Iowa Scrap Key to Big Ten Crown

Conference Titles, NCAA Berths
At Stake Throughout Nation

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—The college basketball season is heading into the home stretch and all eyes Monday night will be focused on the Kentucky-Alabama, Iowa-Minnesota and Colorado-Missouri games in which conference championships and automatic NCAA tournament berths may hang in the balance.

Mighty Kentucky, having unexpected difficulty wrapping up the Southeastern Conference title, ran roughshod over Auburn, 93-59, Saturday night. But Alabama, cashing in on the foul line, kept abreast of the Wildcats at 10-2 by whipping Tennessee 88-81.

Iowa moved into a tie with Illinois in the Big Ten as it humbled Michigan 96-84 in a nationally televised game. Both the Hawkeyes and Gophers have won 10 games and lost two.

Colorado defeated Kansas State 63-60 to move a full game ahead of Missouri in the Big Seven scramble. The Tigers (8-2) were not scheduled.

Kentucky, Minnesota and Missouri will have the home court advantage in tonight's important encounters.

Three more teams were added to the NCAA competition over the weekend. Utah knocked off Colorado A&M 65-51 to win its first Skyline Conference crown since 1931. Miami of Ohio won the Mid-American Conference title as runner-up Marshall was spilled by Western Reserve 70-58. And Little Williams of Williamstown, Mass., was added to the "at-large" field.

There was little joy in Pennsylvania as Duquesne, ranked fourth in the Associated Press poll, and Penn, the Ivy League leaders, unexpectedly were beaten.

The Pittsburgh club lost to Dayton 67-58 as the Flyers' Bill Uhl, a mere 7 feet tall, hit for 29 points.

Penn muffed a chance to clinch at least a tie for the Ivy title as Columbia upset the Red and Blue 90-82 in overtime.

Southern Methodist moved into a deadlock with Texas Christian for the lead in the Southwest Conference. The Mustangs edged Rice 86-82 in overtime for an 8-3 mark. Each pace-setter has one game remaining on its schedule.

SMU against Texas and TCU against Arkansas, both games Tuesday night.

Tulsa, led by Bob Patterson's 39 points, overpowered St. Louis 76-62 to take a half game lead over the losers in the Missouri Valley Conference, San Francisco, the nation's No. 1 team was not scheduled.

Sixth-ranked North Carolina State wound up its regular season with a 68-59 victory over George Washington.

Dickie Herrie of Wake Forest set a major college career scoring record of 2,539 points by tallying 29 as the Deacons stopped Clemson 100-79.

BRAVES' GENERAL MANAGER JOHN QUINN CHECKS TICKET COUNTER Mrs. Quinn Accompanies Husband on Trip to Milwaukee Camp at Bradenton

Cracker Prospects Bright, Quinn Says

Braves' GM Stops Here En Route to Spring Camp

Prospects for a strong Atlanta Cracker team this season are very good, Milwaukee General Manager John Quinn indicated here Saturday night.

Quinn stopped over in Atlanta very briefly en route to the Braves' spring training camp in Bradenton, Fla., which opens March 1.

Quinn reported that manpower-wise the Braves' organization would be very strong, partly because of the fact that some 85 young ball players are being returned from the service. "The Braves, and every other team, have reached the point this year when the number of boys coming back from the service is larger than the number leaving," Quinn said.

Quinn added that the Braves were very deep in pitchers and catchers and that the Crackers could be sure of strength in both positions. The others will have to wait until spring training begins.

gins, he added. "That's Charlie Grimm's problem, winnowing down the large field," Quinn said. "And a very pleasant problem it is."

Quinn said he had high hopes that Chuck Tanner, hard-hitting Cracker outfielder for several years, would be able to stick with the parent club this time. "We believe he'll be able to help us where we need it—from the left side of the plate," he said.

Several of the young pitchers who hurled Atlanta to the Dixie Series crown also have a good chance to make it, Quinn said, especially Don McMahon, the relief ace.

"We have had very fine reports on McMahon during the winter," Quinn said. "He's been pitching for Caguas in Puerto Rico under Ben Geraghty, our Jacksonville manager, and doing very well."

Quinn also said that reports Glenn Thompson, the huge right-hander who helped the Crackers down the stretch, had a bad ankle appeared untrue. "We have heard nothing of that kind from him," he said. —FOX.

PREP ROUNDUP

1954 State Champions Missing From Teams in A, B, C Meets

By MORT PERSKY

Nineteen quintets, with not a '54 state champ among 'em, won district or region crowns in class A, B and C tournaments over the weekend and entered their names on next week's state tournament rolls.

Four '55 titleholders are not included in that number. Champions Athens of region 4-A and Conyers of district 5-B crossed the finish line a week ago, while McRae-Helena and Pine Grove of 8-C and Blackshear and Hazlehurst of 2-A don't put their affairs in order until Monday night.

Perry socked Warner Robins, 68-57, Friday night to replace Fort Valley's state kings as 4-B representatives. Talbot County of Talbotton ripped through Roopville, 70-46, on Saturday to inherit the 4-C title from Georgia champ Rosemont, which fell earlier. Athens had replaced Druid Hills, the 1954 class A state-beater, by whipping Newton County of Covington at the Covington gym last Saturday.

Newnan broke a four-year-long Region 3-A title famine at Lindale Saturday by rolling over Ringgold, 66-54, with the aid of Ted Denney's 35 points and some fancy floor play by Guy Arnall. Center Herman Dove of Irwin County was named the tournament's most valuable player at Fitzgerald as the Irwintonians hooked the 1-A diadem by nudging Cairo's Syrmymakers, 50-46.

Rampaging Lakeland straddled District 8-B after beating Patterson, 75-68, with the biggest winning margin racked up in a class B final. Louis Shipes was responsible for 29 of the 76 and Ralph Berryhill for 20 more. Dale Fillingame had 26 points and Gene Wells 18 in the closest B contest, leading Bradwell Institute of Hinesville into the 1-B stratosphere on a 54-51 squeak past Ludowici.

Union County's Jack Lance pitched up 22 markers to rank as key man in another close one, a 50-46 tangle with the Blairsville lads took from Jefferson in 9-B. Hahira topped Morven, 66-60, in 2-B; Sandersville clipped Cochran, 54-46, in 6-B; Valley Point slid by Dallas, 55-41, in 7-B, and Thomson's tall men out-reached Watkinsville, 66-52, in 10-B. All these finals were played Saturday.

Perry knocked off Warner Robins, 68-57, for the 3-B pinnacle in a Friday night fracas.

In the highest-scoring finale of all, East Crisp's Tigers gathered in 3-C laurels by rallying in the closing seconds at Cordele and throwing Pitts for a 94-88 loop.

Results of the other class C finals: 1-C—Porter 60, Nevils 46; 2-C—Damasco 60, Coolidge 47; 6-C—Brewton 50, Dexter 46; 7-C—Pine Log 39, Tunnel Hill 37; Dawson County 47, Tate 39; 10-C—Union Point 67, Bogart 64.

Bears, Profs Open Tourney in Tallahassee

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., Feb. 27—A four-way fight for a national college basketball tournament berth opens tomorrow night in the district 25 NAIA playoffs at Tallahassee's Florida High gym.

Georgia Teachers (19-3) and Mercer (8-13), the Georgia entries, clash at 7:30 p.m. and host Florida State (19-3) vies with Stetson (10-10) at 9:15.

On the basis of season's records, Georgia Teachers and FSU, two of the nation's hottest small-college teams, are favored to meet in the tournament finale at 8:05 Tuesday night. The winner will represent the Georgia-Florida district in the national NAIA tournament at Kansas City, Mo., March 7-12.

The Professors of Georgia Teachers, whose 90.3 team scoring average ranks seventh in the nation, will carry the longest winning streak into the two-day, sudden-death tourney. Coach J. B. Seacore's Profs won their last 13 regular-season starts after early losses to FSU, Rollins and Erskine.

MOROCCO GETS $500 BONUS FOR SIGNING WITH MONTREAL

Zippy Morocco, the lithe former Georgia halfback from Youngstown, Ohio, will make good in 1955 on a contract he signed two years ago with Peabody Walker's, Montreal Alouettes.

Morocco, who graduated from Georgia in 1952 after a great two-sport career, signed with Walker's Canadian club then. But the Army interfered before he could play a minute up north.

Sunday afternoon, Morocco dropped by Walker's Ben Hill winter residence and signed another contract, this one including a $500 bonus, Walker revealed.

Morocco, stationed at Ft. Jackson, S.C., during his Army term, will be discharged in June and join the Alouettes for the 1955 season. Walker said he planned to use the 5-10, 170-pounder at halfback on offense, safety on defense.

Morocco, who took in the Tech-Georgia basketball game here Saturday night, appeared in as good shape as when he set a new Southeastern Conference basketball scoring record in 1952. He has been competing in both basketball and football at Ft. Jackson.

Walker said the only Southeastern Conference football player he now plans to try to sign is Larry Morris, captain and center of Georgia Tech's Cotton Bowl champions. —FOX

Two Jackets, One Bulldog Triumph in ACC Games

Georgia and Georgia Tech's trackmen didn't figure prominently in the battle for the team championship, but two jackets and one Bulldog did excel in individual events of the Atlantic Coast Conference indoor games

Carl Vereen

Saturday night at Chapel Hill, North Carolina.

Georgia's Kermit Perry, who seems headed for a great year in the hurdles, was a double winner at Chapel Hill. He equaled the meet record of .07.9 in winning the 70-yard low hurdles and came back to capture the 70-yard highs with a .08.7 effort. Bob Davis grabbed a tie for second in the high jump.

Tech's Carl Vereen, who is still to reach his best form in the shot put, managed to win it for the second year in a row with a heave of 50-34.

The real surprise for Georgia Tech was Frank Rust in the broad jump. Frank, who was supposed to make his big splash in the hurdle events, came through with a leap of 22-4½ to take the broad jump after failing to qualify for the hurdle finals.

In the high hurdles, Rust hit one and was out of the running.

Coach Dean was particularly pleased with John Fortune, freshman middle distance runner. Fortune, who has been working at track only a few weeks, led the pack most of the way in the three-quarter mile event, only to fade at the finish from lack of experience and foundation work. Dean tags him a fine prospect. Stan Flowers placed second in the frosh high jump for Tech. Simonton, Georgia's yearling sprint ace, was second in the freshmen 60-yard dash.

New 3rd Army Band Chief Arrives at Ft. McPherson

Chief Warrant Officer Eugene J. Papi is newly assigned as supervisor of 3rd Army bands at headquarters at Ft. McPherson.

Papi comes from Atlanta, Georgia, where he had been band supervisor at Ft. Jackson since 1953. He is a native of Old Forge, Pa., and one of two living band leaders who graduated from the old Army Music School in Washington.

A music arranger, he is probably the first man ever to arrange Japanese folk music for an American military band. He did so as leader of the 24th Infantry Division Band in Kokura, Japan, during the early days of the occupation.

"About 30,000 to 35,000 Japanese would gather at the Sunday concerts to sing the plaintive words as the band played," Papi recalls. "I think the meaning of democracy was brought home to more people by those concerts than anything else."

Papi will be in charge of all 18 bands in the seven-state 3rd Army area.

Philadelphia Orchestra Here Tonight

Conductor Eugene Ormandy and his Philadelphia Orchestra are slated to arrive in Atlanta Monday morning for the concert here Monday night.

They will play at the Municipal Auditorium at 8:30 on the All-Star Concert Series.

The program will include Ormandy's own arrangement of Handel's "Water Music Suite," "Pojola's Daughter," by Sibelius, "Til Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks," by Strauss and Tchaikovsky's "Fourth Symphony."

A few tickets are available, the All-Star office pointed out.

Costs of Joint Health Department Run $21,000 Less Than 1951, McGee Reports

A joint health department for Atlanta and Fulton County is proving cheaper than separate departments, Dr. Roy W. McGee, county health commissioner, has reported.

Dr. McGee told the County Board of Health that operating costs of the combined department last year were $21,000 less than costs of operating separate departments in 1951.

He said this, was despite greatly expanded health services, including additional tuberculosis clinics, a new dog pound, expanded dental services and maternal and child care.

The health commissioner said state participation had increased by $59,624 and income was up $37,914. He said the department had to assume a $90,000 obligation to equalize salaries of city employees who were transferred to the department under the merger.

Another $9,262 obligation was incurred when the county had to assume 50 per cent of the costs for its cardiac program. Dr. McGee said this program previously was paid for entirely by the state.

Adding the increased income and obligations and deducting from that the $174,000 increase in the budget shows the department actually is $21,000 to the good.

The health commissioner also pointed out that despite expansion of services, personnel of the department has not expanded. He said the county now has fewer health employees than the two separate units had in 1951.

Dr. McGee reported that the city then had 242 health employees and the county 103, a total of 345. The joint unit now has only 315 employees, the commissioner added.

Legion Officials Plot Rehabilitation

Georgia rehabilitation representatives of the American Legion will meet with officials of other states in a planning conference in Washington, D.C., Tuesday through Friday.

Elmer Barfield and Bernard Pyle, both of Atlanta, are among the delegates.

Other Georgians who will attend include James E. Powers, Macon; Jack Langford, Griffin; A. V. Akin Jr., Ashburn; David Stripling and Maurice Webb, Newnan; Owen Jackson, Columbus; Coleman Speer, Americus; H. B. Edwards Jr., Valdosta; E. T. Harrell, Cochran; Edward Jensen, Forsyth; James T. Green, Savannah; Lonnie Barrett, Cairo, and Leon Hobby, Moultrie.

A major conference issue will be the current shortage of hospital beds for veterans with mental illnesses. Officials reported 56 per cent of all beds being operated by the Veterans Administration are now devoted to mental cases. Thousands more mentally ill veterans are hospitalized in state and private hospitals, they reported.

Million Will Make Homes Within 10 Miles of Five Points by 1980

HERE ARE THE NEIGHBORHOODS WHERE MORE THAN A MILLION PEOPLE ARE EXPECTED TO LIVE IN METROPOLITAN ATLANTA OF 1980

Stricter Zoning Urged in Developing Suburbs

major street improvement program.

The planners believe construction of a system of arterial highways can take heavy traffic off strictly residential streets. This, they believe, can lead to the development of an orderly network of healthy, interdependent neighborhood communities separated but tied together by those arterial routes.

As a first step in the program, the MPC urges the classification of proposed residential land into three groups:

1. Development areas—the outlying sections where subdivision and construction will occur during the next few years.

2. Mature areas—established neighborhoods which must be protected from blighting influences.

3. Renewal areas—the older, centrally located neighborhoods that already are slums or have declined so far that major rehabilitation and redevelopment are necessary.

BRIGHT ASPECT

A bright aspect of Atlanta's future residential picture is that there is an abundance of land in every direction that can be developed into home sites.

Already the fastest growth is in the suburbs as the automobile age permits home builders to move out to the open spaces. And this residential construction has been spectacular in recent years.

The Fulton-DeKalb area alone showed a net increase of 44,252 dwelling units between 1940 and 1950—and the gain since 1950 is about 38,000 units. About 75 per cent of these homes built since 1940 are outside the old 37-square-mile limits of Atlanta before the Plan of Improvement.

65 NEIGHBORHOODS

As this outward trend continues, the MPC figures many of the 65 neighborhoods it proposes for Atlanta will see sharp rises in population.

The older, close-in neighborhoods will lose population as their residents move out and business and industry move in.

For instance, the Boulevard-

Highland section, which had 47,351 residents in 1950, is expected to have only 26,200 by 1980.

There will be similar declines in such neighborhoods as Ashby-Hunter and in the McDaniel area where redevelopment is slated.

Intermediate neighborhoods, such as Piedmont Park, Virginia-Highland, Inman Park-Kirkwood and West End are expected to remain relatively stable in population.

SUBURBS SPECTACULAR

But the growth will be spectacular in many suburban neighborhoods and communities. Some of these which had only a few hundred or thousand people in 1950 will contain as many as 10,000 or 20,000 in the future.

Some examples: The Mount Vernon-Powers Ferry area with only 800 persons in 1950 will have 9,400 residents 25 years from now, according to the MPC forecast. The Wieuca-Lenox neighborhood will increase from 6,300 to 19,000; Shallowford from 1,316 to 14,000.

Panthersville-Flat Shoals is expected to go from 1,547 to 11,900; Jonesboro-Blair Village from 4,567 to 24,900, and Adamsville from 2,707 to 22,400.

STANDARDS PROPOSED

The new development areas present a golden opportunity to develop ideal neighborhoods. Street patterns have not been set and there is no burden of past mistakes. Planners can start from scratch.

For these brand new neighborhoods, the MPC recommends these standards:

1. Large enough to support an elementary school.
2. Bounded on all sides by arterial streets that permit through traffic to by-pass residential streets.
3. Good subdivision design and layout conforming to an over-all neighborhood plan.
4. Residences facing away from the arterial streets.
5. Adequate park and playground facilities.
6. Adequate utilities and services.
7. Convenient to schools, shopping, churches and community centers.

The major tools for developing and maintaining such neighborhoods, the MPC says, are: Strict land-use zoning; right-of-way protection maps showing future streets and highways; strict application of a reasonable building code; modern subdivision regulations; deed covenants setting development standards, and proper location of schools, parks, etc.

MATURE AREAS

The already established, mature residential areas present a different problem. And in such neighborhoods 60 per cent of Atlanta's present housing is located.

They present a crucial problem, according to the planning commission, because they are rapidly deteriorating and may become "day

3 Georgians Elected to Top Positions In Southern Federal Safety Council

Three Georgians were elected to top positions in the Southern Federal Safety Council at a New Orleans meeting Sunday.

Brunswick A. Bagdon, head of the Department of Labor Statistics Office in Atlanta, was named vice chairman. Harold L. Rush of Warner-Robins Air Force Base at Macon was named chairman, and W. J. Belflower, also of Macon, was named secretary.

The safety council meeting was held prior to the opening of the Southern Safety Conference in New Orleans Monday. The safety coordinators are planning another "slow down and live" campaign to reduce traffic mishaps during the travel-heavy summer months.

after tomorrow's slums" if something isn't done.

Nearly all of these areas already are being invaded by one or more forms of "blight," such as heavy traffic through them, encroachment of business and industry, noise and smoke or odors, inadequate facilities, conversion of single-family dwellings to apartments, and old age and poor maintenance of some of the houses.

To protect and revitalize these mature areas, "Now for Tomorrow" recommends stricter but realistic zoning and implementation of the major street and thoroughfare plan. Adequate streets going around those neighborhoods would drain off traffic now going through them.

Off-street parking spaces, interior block green spaces and play lots could help. Commercial and industrial encroachment could be stopped through strict zoning and buffer strips could be established to screen residential areas from business and industrial plants. Enforcement of smoke abatement ordinances, active clean-up and repair programs, licensing of rooming and boarding houses, and community planning for improvements are advocated.

RENEWAL AREAS

"Now for Tomorrow" recommends more drastic action for what it terms the "renewal areas" which already have deteriorated into slums or near slums and contain 22 per cent of Atlanta's dwelling units.

Two basic approaches are urged—redevelopment to clear everything off and rebuild according to a new plan—or rehabilitation to make the most of existing buildings and streets.

Although Atlanta's present slum dwelling rehabilitation program offers a partial solution, the MPC recommends further steps such as the closing of certain streets to remove through traffic. Those streets would be replaced by a system of walkways to school and paved play areas for children. Neighborhoods thus improved might encourage private investors to replace existing buildings as they wear out.

In areas beyond repair, the commission recommends that the parcels of land be assembled by a public agency and a new street and property plan created. The land could then be sold to private developers to rebuild in a sound manner.

Roads Chief Says Many Near Ruin

Georgia's primary roads need repairing from "one end to the other" because heavy traffic has "practically destroyed them," Walter A. Blasingame, chairman of the State Highway Board, said Sunday.

Blasingame and another board member, Dixon Oxford, were guests on WSB-TV's Press Gallery.

NEED FEDERAL AID

Blasingame said that maintenance work represents such a big slice of the highway department's budget that a program for new primary roads must await federal aid.

If President Eisenhower's highway program is approved by Congress, Blasingame said, "We should have the largest road building program in the history of the state." The President's program calls for 101 billion dollars federal aid to states for highway construction over a 10-year period.

Oxford, who is chairman of the new State Rural Roads Authority, said the federal program also would eliminate any need for toll roads in Georgia.

MAY CHANGE MIND

He said that if the federal program does not materialize and a need for toll roads in Georgia develops, Gov. Griffin probably will push for toll road legislation. Griffin carried out a campaign promise recently by having the State Toll Road Authority abolished.

Oxford said the authority was a "stand-by" piece of legislation from the beginning, and that the General Assembly would pass new toll road legislation if the need arises.

PRIORITY BY 'USE'

Paving priority will be on a "use" basis, he said, and most of the roads probably will have a daily traffic load of more than 100 cars.

Oxford said that of the state's 70,000 miles of rural roads, 908 miles have an average daily load of more than 1,000 vehicles, and 16,000 miles have an average of 100 to 500 vehicles.

The television program was presented by The Atlanta Journal. The guests were questioned by Don Carter, city editor of The Journal, and Franklin Nix, staff writer. Editor James Saxon Childers served as moderator.

WMU Plans 5-Day Prayer Services

The Woman's Missionary Union of Second-Ponce de Leon Baptist Church will sponsor prayer services at the church at 11 a.m. Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday.

A special service also is scheduled at 8:30 p.m. Wednesday in conjunction with the regular church night supper.

The services will be held in observance of the annual season of prayer for home missions which the union sponsors.

Mrs. Carlton W. Binns, chairman of the observance at Second-Ponce de Leon Church, also is in charge of the season of prayer observance in Baptist churches throughout Georgia.

The purpose of the observance, she said, is to encourage church members to learn about, pray for and donate to home mission work.

The speaker for Monday's service will be the Rev. Sam T. Mayo, a missionary to migrant workers who moves annually from Florida up to eastern seaboard.

Tuesday's speaker will be Mrs. Allegra La Prairie, superintendent of the Woman's Emergency Home and Baby Placement Center, New Orleans, La. The center is the only one of its kind operated by Southern Baptists.

Wednesday night the speaker will be Dr. S. F. Dowis, secretary of cooperative missions for the Southern Baptist Home Mission Board.

The speaker Thursday will be the Rev. Frank Halbeck, Atlanta field worker for the Home Mission Board, who will discuss his work among the Jews.

The speaker for Friday will be Dr. Alfred Carpenter of Atlanta, director of the Chaplains Commission of the Southern Baptist Convention.

Second-Ponce de Leon Church's financial goal for the week is $2,500 to be given to the Annie W. Armstrong for Home Missions.

Group Will Discuss

Gerald Johnson Book. Gerald Johnson's book, "The Making of A Southern Industrialist," will be discussed by the Ida Williams Library Branch's adult American Heritage Series group at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, in the library auditorium.

Mrs. Laura Dodson, librarian, said Miss Mildred Mullins will lead the discussion, fifth in a series of eight.

Atlanta Youngster Desiring College Has Plenty People Pulling for Him

By MARJORY SMITH

Any Atlanta youngster who wants to continue his education beyond high school has a lot of folks "pulling for him" here.

Teachers, counselors, college scouts—even Atlanta industrialists are behind him 100 per cent.

The city school system, only one in the nation to maintain a permanent liaison office between its board of education and colleges and universities, encourages boys and girls to plan for a college education, E. L. Floyd, chief liaison officer, said.

"We do everything we know to build a bridge over the chasm that has traditionally divided high school from college," Floyd declared.

"More Atlanta students trudge across it every year—and happily find that college campuses are really familiar ground!"

COLLEGE PREPARATORY

City high schools' curricula include a broad college preparatory course, even for students whose immediate plans do not include study beyond high school graduation.

"Fortunes and interests of people have a way of changing," Floyd explained. "Sometimes a youngster who thought he couldn't afford college finds a way. A high school sophomore who thinks he doesn't want to go off to school may have a change of heart by the end of his junior year."

"Whether Atlanta high school students specifically prepare for college or not, they will find their required high school courses will enable them to enter college."

Atlanta industries step into the picture at one point. Firms in this area keep an eye on promising young graduates. Many Atlanta companies cooperate in "diversified education" programs whereby boys and girls go to school in the morning and hold down regular jobs at night.

"CAREER DAYS"

Tenth, 11th, and 12th grade students in Atlanta schools participate in an annual "Career Day." This event brings businessmen and women of the community into schools to give students an "inside look" at specific careers.

Boys and girls separate into groups with specific interests. Visiting lecturers give them the "low-down" on the preparation needed for the jobs in which youngsters have indicated an interest. They tell requirements, pay, possibilities of advancement, advantages and disadvantages.

Annual "College Week" observance in Atlanta schools sets many youngsters to weighing pros and cons of a higher education.

All 17 high schools in the city system hold College Week in early November. The event features get-togethers between students and representatives of colleges and universities over the country.

STUDENTS SOUGHT

Last year more than 80 institutions of higher learning sent "scouts" to Atlanta during College Week. Each June the Atlanta office of College Liaison issues invitations to about 150 colleges which "have a sustained interest in Atlanta high school graduates."

Ivy League institutions, topnotch

engineering schools, and colleges across the country seek out Atlanta students. City high school graduates in recent years have established an enviable record in carrying off scholarships and "shining" academically in colleges far from home.

Counselors in Atlanta high schools play a vital role in encouraging boys and girls to continue their education, according to Floyd.

If a youngster financially able to go on to college becomes distracted by an offer of an immediate job, a counselor often steps in to remind him of the long-range advantages of waiting and finishing his education.

City schools maintain a library of college catalogues available to interested students. Counselors and liaison office keep youngsters up to date on latest news in education and scholarships.

The liaison office also helps Atlanta students prepare for the stiff college boards exams required for admission to many Eastern schools.

TESTS AT EMORY

Atlanta students can take these tests at Emory University. Some boys and girls take exams as early as their junior year; then if they "fall down" the first time, they may come back next year for another test.

The Atlanta school system established its unique liaison office five years ago. At that time, Floyd said, about 30 per cent of Atlanta high school graduates were going on to college. Today more than 50 per cent enroll in college.

Atlanta boys and girls annually carry off about $250,000 in college scholarships offered across the nation. A number of local youngsters have successfully applied for early admissions in accelerated college programs. Some have obtained coveted scholarships and fellowships to foreign universities.

Georgians Plan Trips Abroad at Boom Pace

By ANNE GOWEN

The number of Georgians traveling outside the United States this summer will double that of 1954. This is the prediction of local travel agents who are in the midst of planning summer vacation for Atlantans, Georgians and other Southerners.

One agent reported his reservations for the June-August season are three times as many as last year. Another said his inquiries and trip-planning have doubled over 1954.

ALLIANCE MEET

Part of the travel increase to Europe—which is more popular this year than ever before, agents said—is due to the Baptist World Alliance meeting in England July 16-22.

C. G. Anchors, deputy clerk in U.S. District Court, said the number of passport applications is growing rapidly day by day.

Several hundred local Baptists have called Anchors to inquire about passport procedure.

He has advised them to apply early, allowing at least a month to get their passports cleared by the State Department.

To get a passport a person needs $10, a birth certificate, two photographs 2½ inches square and a witness who has known the applicant at least two years, Anchors said.

EARLY INDICATIONS

Anchors and the travel agents agreed that most of the church people who attend the Baptist conference plan to visit the European continent before they come back home.

The travel agents find early indications that summer, 1955, will be the "greatest travel year since the war."

It will take some finagling, they said, to get their clients low-priced passage on steamships leaving for Europe between June 1 and July 31 or returning to the U.S. between July 1 and Oct. 31.

"Tourist and cabin classes on all lines are virtually sold out already," one agent said.

Countries gaining popularity with Southern visitors are Spain, Austria and the Scandinavian countries, according to the agents.

HEMISPHERE TRIPS

Shorter trips within the Western Hemisphere, especially to Nassau and Havana, will be popular this summer, even though Central and South America generally have been predominantly winter resorts.

"If there is any place that's losing popularity, I suppose it would be Paris. But people still want to go there, especially on their first trip abroad," one agent said.

Ships are still the favorite transportation to other countries, the agents agreed.

And, they pointed out, steamship lines are beginning to cater to Southern travelers. There are now large liners sailing from New Orleans, Savannah, Charleston and Morehead City, carrying Southerners who prefer to leave from a port nearer than New York.

Dr. Daniel B. Leigh Extends Special Clinic

Just one look at your calendar . . . and it tells you that Spring is only 21 days away.

Many persons look forward eagerly to this most wonderful of nature's seasons, but it's hard to generate enthusiasm when you have a constant headache feeling—or a nagging backache—or poor elimination, causing loss of pep and energy. For men and women who may be suffering from these and similar ailments, Dr. Daniel B. Leigh's special Health Clinic, which has proved so successful the past few weeks, is being extended for 10 more days.

Take for instance, that nagging backache. Dr. Leigh, well-known Atlanta chiropractor, has specialized for years in spinal diagnosis and treatment — of bringing welcome relief to many patients who have had "aching backs" for long periods of time.

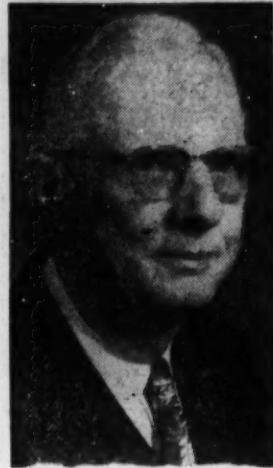

"We know that pain is nature's way of telling us that something is wrong," points out Dr. Leigh. "We know, too, that pain in any part of the back is frequently caused by misaligned vertebrae somewhere in the spinal column which places pressure on nerves. Permanent relief just isn't possible in this type of case until the vertebrae is restored to its normal position."

Poor elimination and constant headaches are other common body ailments which can be relieved through chiropractic. Dr. Leigh, in his special Midwinter Clinic, is offering consultation without obligation.

Dr. Leigh operates one of the most modern clinics of its kind in the South at 40 Peachtree Pl., NW. It includes all that is new and up-to-date in chiropractic care.

Hurried diagnosis may result in doing the patient more harm than good . . . and for this reason Dr. Leigh emphasizes that no case is treated hastily, regardless of its nature. Dr. Leigh depends directly upon the data of anatomy, physiology, neurology, pathology and physics in analyzing every case. X-rays are taken at the beginning of treatment, and the patient's improvement is charted throughout.

In addition to scientific diagnosis, many patients are pleasantly surprised when Dr. Leigh prescribes a form of "treatment" which he himself finds beneficial and stimulating. Dr. Leigh finds that his two hobbies of fishing and photography are healthful.

Give Dealers Preview of New Features

Edwards-Harris Co., Georgia Distributor for the famous SCOTT-ATWATER outboard motors, will present the 1955 motors to Georgia dealers during the annual Motor and Boat show which will be held at the Municipal Auditorium March 5-12. Dealers will be shown the new line at a special sales meeting Wednesday, March 9, when the 1955 promotional program will be revealed by Scott-Atwater officials. Afterwards the group will attend the annual Southeastern Motor and Boat Show.

SCOTT-ATWATER sales showed a sales jump of 47 per cent for 1954 as compared to outboard industry sales increases of only 11 per cent. This tremendous increase has been made possible due to the company setting design pace for the industry.

Famous SCOTT-ATWATER "FIRSTS" are: FIRST with gear-shift. FIRST with non-pressurized remote gas tank. FIRST with automatic fuel pump and carburetor drain. FIRST with the BALL-A-MATIC.

Here came 1955 and Scott-Atwater is FIRST to feature Hush-Spring Mount and Aquamute Exhaust. Whoever heard of an outboard motor with a quiet exhaust? It's easy to nap when a Scott comes by purring along a most quiet as modern-day autos.

SCOTT-ATWATER is now in production on a 30-horsepower outboard motor that will create history. Georgians in particular want to breeze by the other fellow, "gitting their fastest with the most" (with a Scott 30-hp.). The 30 is not a large cumbersome, unwieldy motor. It doesn't look much larger than the present 16-horse motors.

The fisherman is not forgotten. All models from the handy 3.5 horse to the 30 horse will troll down to a lazy mile an hour gait.

There will be more lady skippers in 1955. They like the Ball-a-matic feature in Scott-Atwater Motors. It is the gadget that keeps the boat dry and makes mother feel safe about the kids. A leaky boat is a dangerous thing when far from shore, but not when you own a Scott-Atwater Outboard motor equipped with this safety device.

The famous Edwards-Harris gang will be on hand at the Motor and Boat show to welcome the public and dealers. Well remembered names are K. P. Harris, Pink Edwards, W. C. Reedy Jr., Roy Sargent, Pete Pettit and others.

All Scott-Atwater Outboard Motors will be a feature of the coming show March 5-March 12. See for the first time the new famous 30-HP model.

SMOOTH, FLOWING POWER—The superb 1955 Scott-Atwater 30-hp. is your key to new outboarding adventure. Wonderfully quiet and smooth, it incorporates all the many features which has made Scott-Atwater the favorite among outboard enthusiasts. Edwards-Harris Co., 258 Peachtree, widely known distributor, is introducing the new line this week. See story.

NEW HILL H-5 CLEANS HANDS INSTANTLY!—Without water . . . without time off from work, new Hill H-5 Liquid Waterless Hand Cleaner does a superior cleansing job in seconds—without leaving work. Photos above show how Hill's H-5 is ideal hand cleaner in offices and machine shops. Gentle as a lotion, no sink or faucets are needed. Just apply and wipe dry. The handy Hill H-5 dispenser is easily installed at convenient points in a plant or shop.

Hill's H-5 Removes Grease, Dirt, Grime 'Like Magic'

New Product Receives Fast Acceptance

Introduced to Southern industry exactly two weeks ago, amazing "H-5 Liquid Waterless Hand Cleaner," newest product developed for industrial users by the Hill Manufacturing Co. of Atlanta, already has been acclaimed by many plants and shops in this region as the truly quick, easy, modern way to keep hands clean.

To comply with the steadily-growing demand, company officials announced today that H-5 can other types of businesses, large and small, where hands get dirty and greasy.

This newest "baby" from the House of Hill was formulated and developed in the Hill Laboratories after nearly a year of research and experimentation. Only the finest ingredients are used in its manufacture. H-5 Liquid Waterless Hand Cleaner contains remarkable "Actamer," the antiseptic that not only retards infections from cuts and scratches . . . but also helps prevent dermatitis. It contains Lanolin, to supplement the natural skin oils and to soften and smooth the skin. It retards chapping.

And, very importantly, H-5 contains special emulsifying agents to dissolve and remove grease, dirt, grime and other foreign matter without scrubbing.

Tests show that H-5 is an unbelievable time saver for both employee and employer, because the daily "clean-up" period requires no water and no washroom waiting. Following are some Hill H-5 features:

Cuts Costs: Cleans in 30 seconds . . . really cleans, dissolves and removes stubborn stains like ink, grease, paint and varnish in a hurry. Since there is no water to absorb, a single paper towel completely removes H-5 from the hands. There is less plumbing expense, for H-5 disposes of dirt and grease the waterless way. Just toss the used paper towel into a waste container.

No Washroom Waiting: H-5

saves time, because the cleanup requires no water. In fact, both Hill's H-5 and paper towels can be kept right at the worker's machine or work bench.

Guards Health: Lanolin, glycerin and actamer, all part of the H-5 formula, actually benefit skin health. Workers, both men and women, appreciate the fact that H-5 is nonirritating, nonabrasive . . . and that it contains no harmful ammonia to irritate sensitive skin. It's pleasing, pleasant . . . a real boon to anybody who has to wash his hands at work.

For best results, the new Hill Polyethylene Dispenser is recommended. Easy to install in the work area of a plant or shop, it assures instant, positive operation. (Note accompanying photographs.) A metering nozzle delivers the correct amount of liquid. With the distinctive Hill dispenser, you prevent waste. It's unbreakable and safe; the swivel bracket permits easy refilling.

New Hill H-5 Liquid Waterless Hand Cleaner takes its place alongside other well-known Hill products, including Hi-Kleen, Glo-Brite, Tire-Brite, Mat Re-New and many others. The Hill Manufacturing Co., located at 1500 Jonesboro Rd., SE, Atlanta, invites inquiries about the new H-5 Liquid Waterless Hand Cleaner and any other products bearing the famous "Hill Crest of Quality." Call Walnut 8364.

4-H Club Member Reports Bumper Crop for 1954

Despite generally unfavorable weather conditions for corn production in Georgia last year, Nolan Kell, 4-H Club member, averaged 136 bushels per acre on his planting of Sawan's McCurdy Hybrid No. 1001-A yellow.

This was the fourth year in a row that young Kell had planted McCurdy Corn. In 1951, he was top winner in a 17-county 4-H Club contest, winning with a whopping 147 bushels per acre average. Performance figures in 1952 and 1953 were not compiled. Considering drought conditions of last season, his 136 bushels per acre was considered by agricultural experts to be something of a record.

Nolan is the 16-year-old son of H. A. Kell, Route 1, Winston, Ga. The senior Mr. Kell also plants McCurdy Hybrid Corn, buying his seed from J. N. Wilson Co., Sawan dealer in Villa Rica. Sawan, Inc., is the Georgia distributor for McCurdy Hybrid Corn. This big yield, drought-resistant corn is bred and grown in the South for Southern taste.

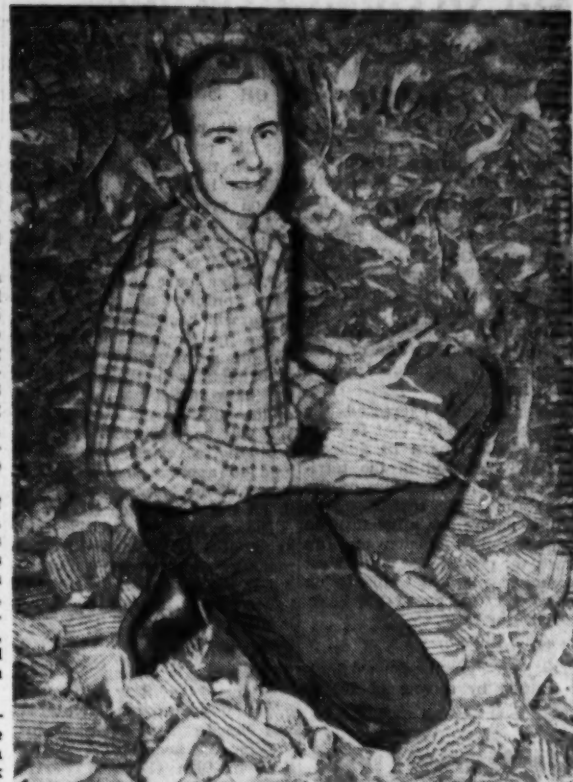

No. 1001-A is a yellow corn variety particularly adapted to the northern half of Georgia. It is a heavy yielder, has excellent husk coverage and is highly weevil resistant. There are other McCurdy varieties, both yellow and white—a corn for every purpose—for all sections of Georgia and other Southeastern states.

In an official test in the Piedmont region last year, Sawan's McCurdy No. 1005-A had a high yield of 139 bushels per acre. White 1005-A is an especially well-adapted white hybrid for the northern half of the state. It is an excellent cribbing corn, and rates tops as a milling corn.

Farmers throughout the entire state are showing enthusiastic interest in the current "Drought-Proof Corn Program" with McCurdy Hybrids. This sensible program is designed to insure corn production no matter what turn 1955 weather takes. The plan, experts agree, can possibly prevent the costly experience of crop failure during dry growing seasons.

Full information on the "Drought-Proof Corn Program" literature and planting schedules may be obtained by farmers at no cost from dealers of Sawan's McCurdy Hybrids. If name of dealer in your vicinity is unknown, write or telephone Sawan, Inc., P. O. Box 237, Station A., Atlanta. Telephone number is AMherst 1645.

Interested seed dealers are invited to contact Sawan for details of their exclusive McCurdy franchise plan.

MAN, THAT'S CORN!—Shown inside his crib full of McCurdy Hybrid Corn is Nolan Kell, Winston, Ga., 4-H Clubber who averaged 136 bushels per acre last season. Read story on this page which also tells of Sawan's "Drought-Proof Corn Program" with McCurdy Hybrids.

Bonn Approves Treaties On German Rearming

Adenauer's Coalition Splits Over Agreement on Saar

Germany within its frontiers of Dec. 31, 1937, and of its population as part of the German nation, in accordance with the principles recognized in the London final act of Oct. 3, 1954 (prelatory to the Paris pact), namely that the final definition of the frontiers of Germany must be delayed until the conclusion of a settlement for the whole of Germany freely negotiated in a peace treaty.

The resolution expressed the Bundestag's opinion that full political freedom must be guaranteed and observed in the territory after the referendum on the Saar statute. The resolution was in the nature of a gesture to German public opinion and an effort to prove that the West German parliament would be on the alert to safeguard the Saarlanders' interests.

263 TO 262

The Saar agreement was finally ratified by a vote of 263 to 262, with nine abstentions. Under its provisions, the French ban on the pro-German parties will be lifted in a three-month period prior to the referendum of the agreement. During this period these parties will be able to campaign against the agreement, but once the statute has been approved all further opposition will be prohibited.

The pro-German parties also will be permitted to enter lists of candidates in the election for the state legislature. The use of the statute as a campaign issue will be forbidden.

Finally, a referendum is to be held to approve the permanent status of the territory as defined in an eventual peace treaty.

The agreement provides for eventual equal economic treatment for Germany and France, but in the meantime the customs and currency union with France is to continue.

STRUGGLE

The struggle among the coalition over the Saar agreement pitted the Christian Democrats and the German Party against the Free Democrats and the All-German Bloc (Refugee Party). The opponents said the rights promised the pro-German parties were fraudulent, that French dominion would become permanent though disguised and that the Saarlanders would continue to be deprived of their political and human rights.

The struggle among the coalition parties overshadowed the dispute between the coalition and the Social Democrats over the arming of West Germany. There was speculation tonight in the Bundestag corridors concerning the life expectancy of the coalition as it is now constituted.

While "never, never" speeches are being made, a conference statement said, "thinking people realize that desegregation is inevitable. Many editors who are writing segregation editorials admit privately that their towns ought to be planning how to make the change gracefully instead of breathing defiance."

The NAACP statement added: "We recognize that there are some problems relative to segregation which must be worked out through negotiation to achieve our objective of first class citizenship and equal treatment under the law."

Declaring that attempts by state governments to "adopt amendments to state constitutions and by other methods circumvent the Supreme Court's decision" will fail, the statement termed these attempts "unconstitutional" and "morally wrong."

The group also called upon members of Congress to include an amendment to pending legislation for federal aid to school construction which would make it mandatory for states to comply with the decision outlawing segregation.

"The frantic plans to evade or defy the Supreme Court ruling which have been made by several states, including Georgia, will warrant analysis and corrective action when and if they begin to function," the statement declared. "We promise to use whatever methods are indicated in a given situation to bring to Negro children and their parents the equal, racially unsegregated public education that has been declared their constitutional right."

Dr. Thomas Dehler, leader of the Free Democrats, replying to Adenauer's denunciation of the party's stand on the Saar issue, made a personal attack on the chancellor. He denounced Adenauer's political methods in the Bundestag and said he nourished the illusion that he was the paladin of democracy in Germany.

ADJOURN

The Free Democrats' attack stunned the house. The Christian Democratic leaders adjourned to study the matter and decided to summon the Free Democrats to take action against Dehler.

The summons, which contained an implied threat, was delivered by Heinrich von Brentano, floor leader of the Christian Democrats.

Dehler, responding briefly, defied the summons and, in effect, told the chancellor to mind his own business.

When the vote on the Saar agreement was taken, most of the Free Democrats and members of the All-German Bloc supported Dehler.

Herr Ollenauer, the Social Democratic leader, protested violently against Adenauer's attempt to smear his party with the Communist brush because it opposed alliance with the West prior to four-power negotiations.

Johnson told Mr. and Mrs. Leolin West of Rumson, he had shot his mother and was contemplating suicide. "He told us he had been in trouble ever since he was a kid. . . . He was awfully nervous and scared. . . . We were, too," said West, a 41-year-old general foreman at the Bendix Aviation Co. in Red Bank, N.J.

NIGHTMARE DRIVE

West and his wife, Dulcie, 37, were accosted by Johnson near the Shrewsbury Diner in Red Bank where they had gone for a snack. "He shoved a gun at me," West said, ordered West and his wife into the car and started the nightmare drive that took the three cruising around the shore area and central sections of New Jersey. "We tried to talk him out of it and get him to throw away his guns," West related. "He made up his own mind about going back home," West said, saying Johnson ordered the couple to drive right up to his own front door with him.

Police said the worst Atlanta mishap prior to Sunday's wreck was on April 18, 1954, when four Negroes were burned to death following a collision on McDonough boulevard.

FIREMEN CLEAN UP

Traffic was held up along the expressway for nearly an hour. Firemen cleaned off pieces of wreckage before traffic resumed along the route.

In other mishaps, Luther M. Arnold, 80, of Statham, was killed when a train struck his automobile on a Barrow County grade crossing Sunday afternoon.

Willie B. Sheffield, 42, of Rte. 3, Hawkinsville, was killed and three other persons were injured Sunday afternoon when the car in which they were riding struck another vehicle at an unmarked intersection eight miles south of Hawkinsville on the Tibbettsville road.

The wife of a driver using another man's license was killed in a two-car collision in Savannah Sunday, police said. Seven others were injured. She was identified as Mrs. Virginia Lowe, 30. Her husband, Edward Lowe, was using a permit issued to Virgil H. Fuller, 22. Police said Lowe's license was suspended after a prior accident.

Bersohn and Mrs. Rickett were met here by persons who had left Peiping previously. U.S. consular officials who knew both in Peiping offered accommodations in their homes for the time being. Both refused, and sought lodgings at the Y. M. C. A.

Bersohn was arrested July 25, 1951, in a general roundup of foreigners in Peiping. Mrs. Rickett was placed under house arrest about the same time, and removed to jail in September, 1952.

The Peiping radio, reporting the ouster of "two convicted American spies," said Mrs. Rickett went to Peiping in 1948. It accused her of carrying out "criminal activity in gathering intelligence about the students' patriotic movement" while a lecturer in English at Tsinghua University.

Peiping said Bersohn went to China in 1945 "as an agent of the U.S. Office of Strategic Services." He was accused of going to Peiping again in 1948 and continuing "subversive activity." The Reds said he supplied U.S. intelligence with information about the Red army.

SPY WORK

Bersohn said approximately the same thing about himself. Mrs. Rickett said she helped her husband in spy work while he was with naval intelligence and later carried espionage in "military, cultural and political matters" for the United States.

Bearded and hair cropped close, Bersohn said he was "full of shame and remorse." He said everybody jailed in Red China was guilty because "the innocent may not be arrested in China."

"I absolutely echo his statements," Mrs. Rickett broke in. Professing belief in the Red's germ warfare charges, Bersohn said they must be true because "I never heard of them (the Chinese) lying to anybody."

When reporters tried to switch the questions to Mrs. Rickett, Bersohn slapped the table and said, "wait, I have another sentence. The Chinese are determined to have peace. Formosa belongs to the Chinese people, not American imperialists. The United States has no right to interfere in this internal matter."

FATTER

Mrs. Rickett wore slacks and a jacket. She said she saw another American, Harriet Mills, in prison, and she was getting fatter and fatter because of the wonderful treatment.

"The people's government has been particularly lenient with me," she said. She said she planned to "return to the United States, be an honest person, and make up in some way what I have done in the past for people who did nothing but harm people."

This Box Was a Sickness Policy

By YOLANDE GWIN

"Now that piece in there has been in my family down in Alabama for years," said Mrs. John Shaw, waving toward a marble-top cherry chest of drawers. "I've always loved antiques."

About that time Mr. Shaw appeared in the doorway.

"Did I hear somebody mention antiques?" he asked.

"Now here's something really old. It came from a pub on my parents' property in Birmingham, England. See the date there? It is 1763. It's really an insurance box. In fact I'll bet it's the forerunner of today's health insurance."

"SOCIETY OF WEEDON"

The small oak box, made with wooden pegs, has on the inner side of the lid a piece of paper on which is printed the rules of the "Society of Weedon, County of Northampton."

It says in part that "no member is entitled to any benefit from the box until one year he has expired from the day of entrance of his contribution and profits to that time cleared up. After which time if he falls into any sickness, lameness, etc., with certain sicknesses excepted, there shall be five shillings a week."

18TH CENTURY

Then Mr. Shaw went on to explain some of the antiques which came from his side of the family—antiques he pointed out were old when America was founded.

"Look at this old clock," he said, winding a massive grandfather type. "The front panel here came from Chester Cathedral, which was restored in the 14th Century."

The Shaws have many handsome Jacobean pieces in their home on Delmont drive. They brought them to the United States in 1948 from Birmingham, England, when Mr. Shaw was transferred by the Coca-Cola Co.

Mrs. Shaw is the former Sara Blanchard of Anniston, Ala., and met her husband in Albany where he was training as a Royal Air Force pilot. They married in Anniston in 1942.

Mr. Shaw said the Jacobean furniture has been in his family for more than 300 years. It is all heavy oak with extensive carving. There are two coffin or joint stools, a two-part chest of drawers, a gateleg table and dower chests.

REST FOR COFFINS

The stools, according to Mr. Shaw, got their names from their dual use, and possession of a pair is somewhat unusual now. On them rested the coffin of any deceased member of the household, and on one of them the master of the house usually sat to carve meat. Higher than an ordinary chair or bench, it gave his elbows plenty of clearance.

The Shaws use the stools as end tables.

One of the interesting chairs owned by the Shaws is also a Jacobean. Mr. Shaw explained:

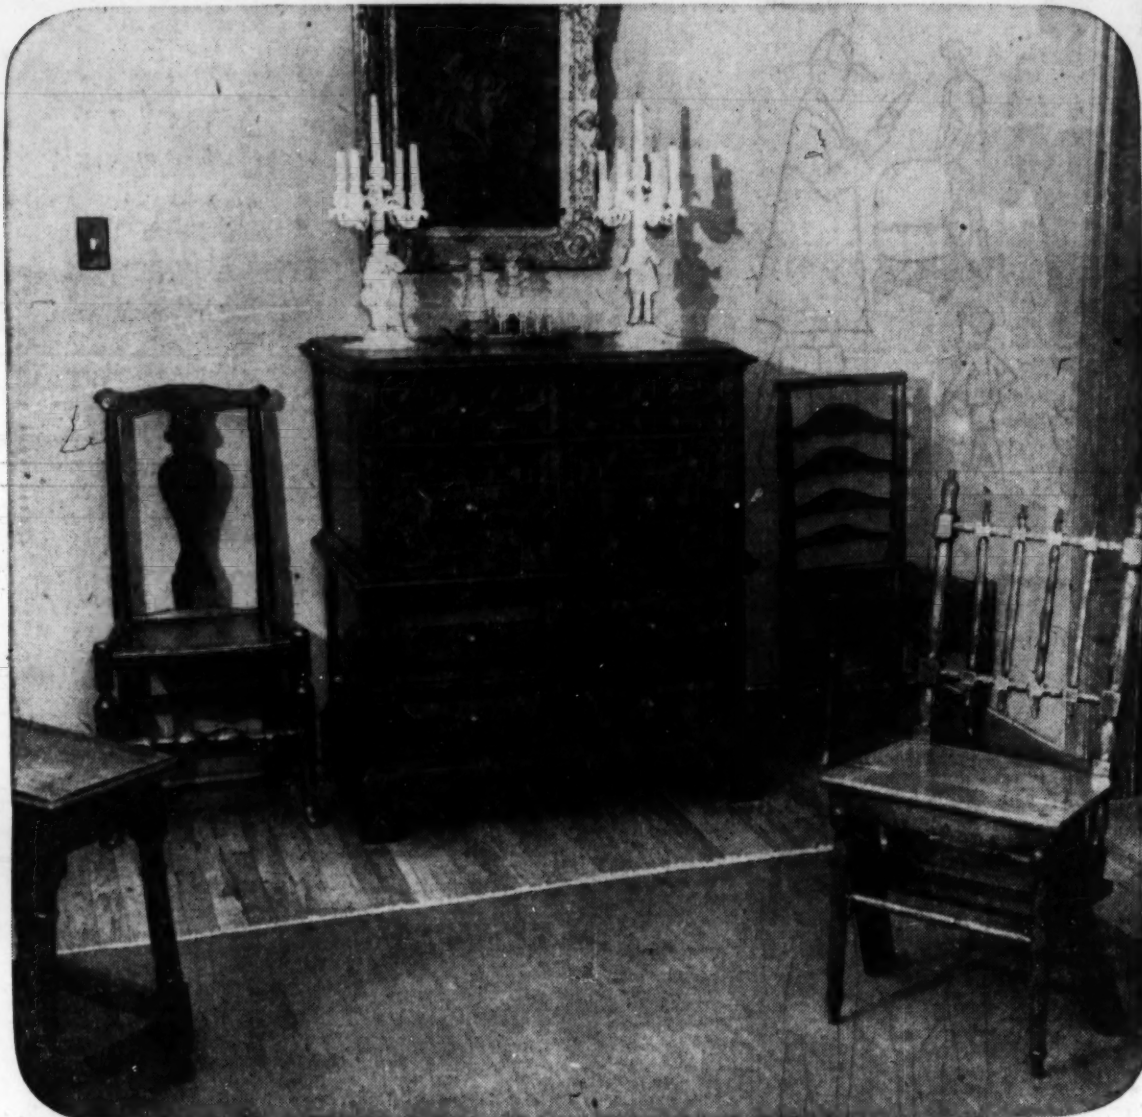

"It was used in my father's library and when it is unfolded makes a small ladder to be used in a library for reaching the higher shelves."

ANSELLINI PAINTING

The Shaws also have an Ansellini painting of the Virgin and Child, Dresden candelabra and figurines, Waterford glass decanters and a Queen Anne loving cup of chased silver.

"Now these Queen Anne chairs are two of my favorite antiques," Mrs. Shaw said.

"But that's not really old, honey," Mr. Shaw continued. "It's just 18th Century. Now these things from my home, they are 17th Century. That's a hundred years' difference."

Hint for Lent

Try Unusual Salmon Loaf With Hot Cooked Cereal

One bite leads to another once you've tempted the family with this out-of-the-ordinary salmon loaf.

The secret of its unusual flavor and light airy texture is the hot cooked cereal ingredient.

Baked Salmon Loaf
Asparagus Tips with Hollandaise Sauce
Citrus Fruit Salad

SALMON LOAF

1 can salmon, drained
1/2 can farina cereal
3 cups milk
2 tsp. butter or margarine
2 tsp. salt

1/4 tsp. pepper
3 eggs, beaten
1 1/2 tsp. chopped onion
1 tsp. lemon juice

1. Remove bones and skin from salmon; break salmon into small pieces. 2. Bring milk to boiling point. Add farina gradually, stirring constantly. 3. Cook over low heat until thickened (2 to 3 minutes), stirring continually. 4. Remove from heat; blend in salmon, butter or margarine, salt, pepper, eggs, onions and lemon juice. 5. Pour into well-greased loaf pan. 6. Bake in moderate oven (375 degrees) about 40 minutes until done. Serves six.

The loaf is moist in itself, but a tomato, mushroom, egg or vegetable sauce adds glamour and extra good eating. For a quick sauce add three hard-cooked eggs and one-half cup canned mushrooms to two cups cream sauce.

Longer Jacket Suits
Give Smooth Look

Those long jacket suits that looked so extreme to you last fall are the suits this spring! Women find that they are much easier to wear than they thought. The longer jackets do a lot for the figure—smooth it out, and give all the longer slim look that is the smart look of the spring.

These are particularly smart in black or navy worsteds, and in the very new looking dark group with chalk or pin stripes like those that are having a revival in men's suit fashions too.

How To Look Like Ava, Lana

Going to have your picture taken soon? You're in luck, m'g'r! I'm all set to tell you how to come out looking like Ava Gardner or Lana Turner.

(Never mind that picture up in the corner. Kenneth Rogers took it back in the year of the chestnut blight and there wasn't a record player within 100 yards of the studio.)

That's the secret—straight from Hollywood—be photographed to music!

All the stars do. Clarence Sinclair Bull, who has been one of MGM's leading portrait artists for 30 years, told me so himself. He was in to chat of beauty (Esther Williams in "Jupiter's Darling") and drama (Spencer Tracy in "Bad Day at Black Rock") and I snagged a few hints from him for those of us who would rather approach the guillotine than the photographer's bench.

It's not the way you look, Pudding Face. Oh, no. It's the way you feel inside. Or so Mr. Bull led me to believe.

He says if you go to a photographer whose work you admire, arrive there in time for your appointment, feel rested and optimistic, leave off the gooky make-up and listen to some good music . . . well, you come out looking just darling. Or, at least, not as repulsive as usual.

Mr. Bull has a great affection for movie stars who arrive for their photographic appointments on time, take direction easily and don't palaver too much about "my good side and my bad side."

He's willing to play for them any kind of music they like—and MGM spends more on records and record players than cameras and lens, Mr. Bull says.

Most of today's crop of young beauties like lively music. Leslie Caron and Debbie Reynolds, for instance. Lana Turner brings in her own records and Garbo who, as all us elderly ones recall, photographed like an angel, either asked for a symphony or silence. No halfway measures for Garbo.

Mr. Bull liked photographing Garbo. He has a choice collection of pictures of her which have never been published, one showing her in a happy, laughing mood which most people said was simply un-Garboish.

"She was happy and laughing like that at times," he recalled. "But if we were taking pictures in here and somebody walked through the next room, even if they couldn't see her, she would freeze."

Mr. Bull was the only still photographer for whom Garbo would pose. He has won three Academy Awards for portraiture and pictorial studios, and once Paramount tried to hire him to photograph Marlene Dietrich the way he did Garbo. He refused the job, and later when he finally knew Miss Dietrich she thanked him for it.

"We'll be friends," she said—and they are.

Mr. Bull has always been careful to avoid lists of Most Beautiful and Most Photogenic, but as long as they are not placed in any particular order he is willing to list 10 actresses, who are tops photographically. They are, as they came to his mind, Jean Harlow ("Ah, what perfection of coloring!"), Gloria Swanson, Hedy Lamarr, Garbo, Esther Williams, Eleanor Parker, Norma Shearer, Lana Turner, Ava Gardner and Elizabeth Taylor.

Right now I feel so good—inside, that is—I think I'll go have my picture taken. Has anybody got a good recording of "This Old House?"

Marcia Winn

Constantly Warning Child Retards Self-Confidence

Mommy'll cry if you don't eat all your carrots. . . . You'll never be a big boy if you don't drink all your milk. . . . We'll go away and leave you all alone in the car if you don't behave.

Spill one more glass of water and you'll get spanked. . . . If you get dirty this time, you will be in real trouble.

Bobby is 3, an only child, and lives in a welter of adult voices. The adults love him very much. They say he is their life. They want him to be perfect. They watch everything he does and constantly corral him.

VOICES FOLLOW HIM

Their voices follow him constantly, voices of doom. They threaten him. They admonish him.

Look out! You'll fall! It'll burn you!

You'll get hurt! You'll break it! . . . You'll tear it! . . . You'll drop it! . . .

Bobby's parents want him to grow up sturdy, manly, and self-reliant. They don't want him to get hurt, to get sick from not eating, to be "bad," or to break the furniture. They are, they feel, reasonably careful, and they know they are conscientious.

They would be outraged if anyone were to say to them that Bobby's life is one threat after another. "But we never threaten Bobby," they would protest. "We love him."

Yet all the warnings, cautions, and entreaties cited here are threats listed by Nina Ride-

DAILY GUIDE—Keep to practical matters in the early hours. Later, through the middle of the day, see what you can make over, salvage, reorganize from what you have rather than seek to have things through wishful thinking.

In the late afternoon keep to sensible ideas about wealth. Those born in the third week of August have the most favorable aspect for shopping or making a deal.

The evening hours are likely to be somewhat oppressive because an important planetary change is taking place; the birthdates involved will be given tomorrow.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY, PISCES! The accent right now is on travel in and around your neighborhood, much activity in everyday affairs and the possibility of having to deal with friction at the end of the month.

During the spring months those who are single should take advantage of opportunities to meet romantic strangers. Later on at the end of the year, those eligible for marriage start a year's cycle in which marriage is possible.

Miss Wilkins, Mr. Cousins Are Married

St. Simons Methodist Church, St. Simons Island, formed the setting for the marriage on Saturday evening of Miss Claire Elizabeth Wilkins of Atlanta, daughter of Mrs. Flora Pickens Wilkins of St. Simons, to Isaac William Cousins Jr. of Decatur.

The Rev. L. E. Gholson of St. Simons was the officiant. After the ceremony the bride's mother entertained at a reception in the church parlors.

I. W. Cousins Sr. of Decatur was best man for his son, and groomsmen were Thomas Grady Cousins of Decatur and Samuel Graham Glover of Rome.

Charles W. Harrison of Decatur and Joseph B. Dodd Jr. of Rome ushered.

Lawrence L. Marcheseau of Atlanta gave his cousin in marriage, and she was attended by her twin sisters, Misses Barbara and Marcia Wilkins, as bridesmaids. Mrs. Joseph B. Dodd Jr. of Rome, the bridegroom's sister, was matron of honor.

After a wedding trip, the couple will reside at 2412 Williams Lane, Decatur.

Ollie Reeves A Rhyme a Day

"Dental care should begin with the child's baby teeth."—Child magazine article quote.

Our Uncle Hank, remembered well . . . from childhood days, would sometimes tell his nieces and his nephews they . . . should brush their teeth three times a day . . . and see the dentist often, too . . . "you won't regret it if you do" . . . he always said "for when you're old . . . you'd almost give your weight in gold . . . to have your old teeth back again . . . and not be toothless as a hen."

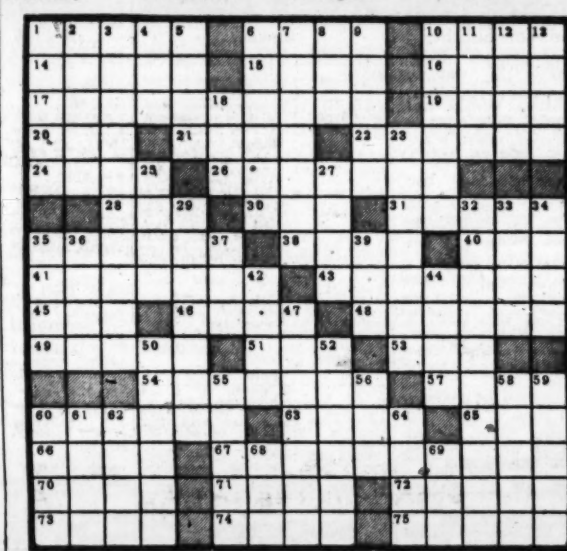

"You can't replace a tooth that's lost . . . although you can afford the cost . . . of artificial dentures that . . . will press the food until it's flat . . . they never grind it quite as fine . . . at least, that is the way with mine."

That good advice from Uncle Hank . . . was just like money in the bank . . . and though he died without a dime . . . he saved the youngsters lots of time . . . they would have spent in dentist's chairs . . . for "excavations and repairs."

WORRY CLINIC

By DR. GEORGE W. CRANE

Lois D. 17, is a very attractive-looking high school senior. "Dr. Crane, what is wrong with me, anyway?" she began. "for I dress well, but I am not popular with boys." "My father is a doctor, and he lets me drive my own car to school every day, so I thought that would be appealing to boys. "But nothing seems to work very well, so something is wrong."

WHY GIRLS FAIL. Fortunately, I knew some of the boys in the high school which Lois attended, so I casually asked them what they thought of her.

"Oh, she's a snob," one of the boys immediately replied. "I dated her one time and after the movie some of the others in our crowd suggested we go to a hamburger joint for refreshments. "But she objected because she was wearing a ritzy new fur coat and didn't want to go to such a 'low brow' place to eat. "Her father has a lot of money and she tries to show off. But we fellows who must pay the bill out of our own earnings, don't have the cash to go to expensive places."

PAPA'S PULL. Many girls, and some boys, too, try to get by socially by depending on "papa's pull," including his wealth or social standing. But you can't buy permanent popularity with other people's money or prestige, so the sooner you get wise to that fact in psychology, the sooner you will be able to build up a solid type of popularity of your own. Many of you high school and college daughters hardly earn even your salt! You neither help your mothers with the housework or cooking or laundry. Some of you are so pampered that you don't make your own beds. Yet you then parade in public with fur coats and other expensive clothing as well as your personal automobile.

TEST YOUR POPULARITY. Suppose you didn't have such fur coats and cars, then what? Would you still be popular? If you want to win real friends and lasting popularity without your papa's pull and without trying to bribe boys with illicit liberties, then rate yourselves on the 200-point "Tests for Sweethearts," enclosing a stamped, return envelope, plus a dime. Address your request to me in care of the Constitution.

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q. 1—As South you hold:
♠A53 ♥A75 ♦A642 ♣7
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 spades Pass 1 spades Pass
What do you bid now?

A.—Nothing. Your jump to three spades promises a hand valued at 13 to 16 points. You haven't any more than that. If partner had sufficient assets to warrant interest in a slam, he would have made some move other than the routine bid of four spades.

Q. 2—As South you hold:
♠K4 ♥AKJ9 ♦AKQJ10 ♣6
The bidding has proceeded:
South North
2 diamonds Pass 2 hearts Pass
What do you bid now?

A.—Four no trump, a clear-cut Blackwood call. Partner has indicated a heart suit that is probably six to the queen and the only pertinent question is the number of aces. If he has two, a grand slam will be there. If he has only one, you will, of course, contract for six.

Q. 3—As South you hold:
♠5 ♥AK1042 ♦AKQJ75 ♣92
The bidding has proceeded:
South North
1 heart Pass 1 spade Pass
2 diamonds Pass 2 spades Pass
What do you bid now?

A.—Pride over the possession of a good hand should not induce you to take a loss in a situation where there is clearly no game. Partner's bidding indicates that his hand is mostly spades for if he had good spades and something in clubs, he would have tried no trump. It is clear, too, that he has no preference for hearts so that game hopes should be abandoned. Your hand will be a good dummy for partner. Partner's hand will be a very indifferent dummy for you. Furthermore, by bidding again you will have increased the contract in a hopeless cause.

Q. 4—As South you hold:
♠A74 ♥J5 ♦K862 ♣Q943
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 spade Double 1 no trump Pass 2 hearts Pass
What do you bid now?

A.—Your high card holding dictates that you make another move. You have an average hand in high cards which will surely produce a game opposite a sound take-out double. In point of fact, if your hand contained another high card, it would be proper for you to respond with two no trump rather than one no trump to your partner's take-out double. The recommended procedure is to bid two no trump.

Q. 5—As South you hold:
♠72 ♥Q9754 ♦1097 ♣K98
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 spade Double 2 spades Pass 2 hearts Pass
What do you bid now?

A.—Partner has indicated that he has a very sound double by forcing you to bid at the level of three despite the fact that you have declined a previous opportunity to speak. Actually, you have a fairly good hand, one in which you could not have been severely criticized for competing on the first round. The recommended bid there is four hearts. It must be borne in mind that if your response is only three hearts partner must be prepared to play the queen of hearts and the king of clubs you would nevertheless have been obliged to bid three hearts. Since partner is willing to assume the risk of a nine trick contract though you may have nothing, your surprise values should induce you to bid one more.

Q. 6—As South you hold:
♠K5 ♥K87432 ♦AK975 ♣K7
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 diamond Double 2 clubs 2 hearts
What do you bid now?

A.—Five clubs. It is true that partner has advertised a strong hand since he failed to redouble and there is some doubt as to whether or not he can make it, but it looks very much as though the enemy are about to bid four hearts, which, apparently, you have no hope of defeating. Since you will feel constrained to make a sacrifice bid in that event, you might as well do it first as last and put the pressure of guessing squarely up to West.

Q. 7—As South you hold:
♠865 ♥108543 ♦64 ♣943
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 spade 1 no trump Double
What do you bid?

A.—Nothing. It would be presumptuous of you to attempt to rescue with this hand. You can't hope to tow anyone out of trouble with a piece of string. Furthermore, partner may wish to rescue himself to two clubs or two diamonds and a two heart bid by you would jack him up one stage higher.

Q. 8—As South you hold:
♠1094 ♥A103 ♦K975 ♣J86
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 no trump Double Pass
What do you bid?

A.—With this hand you have a clear cut "leave-in." Partner's hand is presumably good as an opening one no trump bid; that is to say, at least 16 points. You have eight, which gives your side a preponderance of the high cards, to-wit, at least 24 to 18. West's dummy is known therefore to be a complete blank and his offer to make seven tricks will fall far short of the mark.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VANDELLEN

Infection Control Lengthens Life

At the turn of the century, out of every 1,000 babies who survived birth, 162 could be expected to die before reaching the first birthday. Nowadays, fewer than 30 succumb in the same circumstances. The figures are less startling when adults are included in any group of 1,000 persons. In 1900, 17 of this number passed away whereas today, the death rate is less than 9.

The control of infections in childhood and young adulthood can be given credit for this remarkable change.

As a result, more people are living to middle and old age. But there is a catch to it. The longer we live, the more we are subjected to disorders of the heart and blood vessels. What are we going to do about heart disease? Our heart associations are trying to find the answer to this question but there may be some consolation in realizing it is better to face the risk of a heart attack at 55 or 65 than to be dead of pneumonia or tuberculosis before age 25.

These infections were our most consistent killers in days gone by; not many worried too much about today's big killer — heart disease—because few lived long enough to develop it. But with the advent of the sulfonamides and penicillin, the death rate from pneumonia fell from 152 per 100,000 to 12, and mortality from infections followed suit.

The high school student of today thinks of cholera, yellow fever, smallpox and plague as long forgotten diseases, not realizing that if we let down the bars, these pestilences would return in a jiffy.

Diphtheria, scarlet fever, typhoid, typhus, and tetanus mean more to these teen-agers because they were rare in grandfather's time.

Pest houses were overcrowded decades ago but today many of our contagious disease hospitals are empty for lack of patients. Not long ago, in Florida, I rode past a beautiful tuberculosis sanatorium and predicted it might not last long if the antituberculosis drugs—PAS, streptomycin, and isoniazid—continue to work so satisfactorily.

At present, disorders of the heart and arteries kill four times as many persons annually as does cancer, six times as many as accidents, eight times as many as tuberculosis, and 500 times as many as polio.

Lenten Service

The Rev. Corwin C. von Miller will conduct a special Lenten service at St. John's Episcopal Church, College Park, at 8 p.m. Wednesday, March 2.

The service will be preceded by a covered-dish supper in the Sunday school building at 5:30 o'clock.

League Offers Speaker List

The League of Women Voters in DeKalb County has established a speakers bureau to discuss the coming May 18 referendum on possible government reorganization.

The speakers will be available for civic clubs on request. The league offices are at 139½ Sycamore St., Decatur.

The group is supporting a commission-manager type government, but the speakers offered will discuss the other proposed forms. Included among the lecturers are Dr. Robert Stearns of Oglethorpe, Dr. Cullen Gosnell of Emory, Ray Cole, Clifford Oxford, J. W. Reid, Gene Steele, Graham Green, Mrs. Fleming Law, Mrs. Albert Claypoole and Mrs. Edward Vinson.
